PLEDGE IS PROMISED

Defendant Tells Judge He Will Go at Once to Receptor.

Following a promise that he will go today to Father John F. McShane, rector of St. Bridget's Church, and take a pledge never to drink liquor again, Criminal Judge James A. Collins Thursday afternoon withheld judgment against James Haley, 55, of 25 Blake St., who appealed from city court on a drunk charge. Traffic Officer Dan Logan, who testified for Haley, said he would see that the defendant keeps his promise.

"If you break that pledge you'll be breaking rocks," warned Judge Collins.

Bandits Were Just Frat Prankers

Police spoiled a perfectly good high school fraternity initiation Thursday night.

When Kenneth Hoover, 1203 N. Tuxedo St., saw a trio of masked men in the bushes near Massachusetts Ave. and Dearborn St., he notified Motor-policemen Banks and Dennis. The officers with drawn guns surrounded the bushes.

The "bandits" came out, unmasked and explained that they were initiating new members into their fraternity.

Mrs. Prescott was quite as furious as I, Leslie, but she stood her ground. I will say that for her. She doesn't come from a long line of Puritans for nothing.

"I wonder if my son's wife knows not only of your daily visits to this house, but of the daily visit of that moving picture actress to the children?" she said.

You see, Leslie, Paula has been coming up to the house every day about luncheon time and going in to see the children. You know how daffy she is about children. She would stay there until about 1 o'clock, when I left to go to luncheon, and then we'd go somewhere for our midday meal, and I have been going back to the office for the afternoon.

This seemed to me to be a very nice arrangement, under the circumstances, as I knew that Paula was very nervous over her enforced wait, because of the accident at the mill, and I had to go to see Mr. Prescott every day. But, here was the old woman threatening to spoil everything, as she did ultimately.

She threatened to do this at the time, but I didn't think it was possible she could be so worried. She said to me:

"I, for one, do not approve of strange young women being so much at the home of a young man while his wife is away. I think I'll write Leslie tonight. It seems to me she ought to know absolutely everything that is going on."

When she said this, Leslie dear, I didn't know what to do. You know, I have been thrown so much more with men than with women—especially the kind of women to which Mrs. Prescott belongs, that I guess I am afraid of them. I not only do not understand their language, but I do not think their thoughts. I can not possibly get their point of view.

I didn't want to make trouble between Mr. Prescott and his mother, and I know what a fuss he can kick up at times, so I decided to let things string along for a few days. But I ought to have known that old woman better, even if I did think that perhaps, if I told her that Mr. Prescott had forbidden any one of us to write to you about this accident, she might think that he meant for as well. I should have gone directly to Mr. Prescott's room after this and told him the whole story. Probably it would have saved you a great deal of worry.

Martha Lee's Column

Babes in the Woods

Dear Miss Martha Lee: I am a girl 17. A year ago my parents separated and left me to the world to face my own problem. I go with my boy 20 whom I love and he loves me. He wants me to marry him in a few months. I think I could be happy with him, but I realize I am too young to take the burden of it all. I could be happy with him, but I realize I am too young to take the burden of it all. I could be happy with him, but I realize I am too young to take the burden of it all.

I believe in early marriages, but not this early. You would be traveling the road to rebellion, by marrying so young, and marrying a man with whom you are not even in love. When you are twenty your ideas about your ideal man will have entirely changed, and this man will probably not fill the bill at all. There is the pleasant possibility that you will fall in love with each other, but it is remote because the ideas of seventeen are vastly changed after a few years in this business world of men and women. So—wait awhile. Life can't be so awfully hard now. It will surely grow brighter.
