TIMES TO AID FOREIGN RADIO WEEK EVENTS

Accurate Verification of Programs Will Be Possible.

Complete and accurate verification of foreign programs sent out this year during International Radio week will be available for Indianapolis fans for the first time this year, through an arrangement just concluded between The Indianapolis Times and the International Radio week committee, made up of representatives of some fifteen national radio associations sponsoring the International Radio week movement and the International Broadcasting tests. The Indianapolis Times alone in Indianapolis will offer a full report of the International Broadcasts and a complete verification service.

Last of January

This year the tests will be held the last week in January, and the scope of the Radio week movement broadened to make it more interesting for fans, while a complete organization has been worked out for the verification of reception. As in previous years, American stations will stand by for the hour from 10 to 11 p.m. Central Time, while European broadcasters make every effort to reach American listeners. In the hour just preceding the silent period American stations will broadcast special programs for Europe while overseas listeners time-in.

At a recent meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters, that organization officially endorsed the movement and tests, and will have full charge of the negotiations with broadcasters in this country.

Advance Programs

Advance programs, as scheduled by the overseas stations, will be ready for publication in The Indianapolis Times the day prior to the tests.

Immediately after the hour of broadcasting overseas, each station participating in the tests will transmit a complete log of the station, showing the actual minute of each transmission. This will go by wireless radiogram to the executive headquarters for the week in New York, from where it will be released to The Times by wire, enabling The Times to check and verify claims of overseas reception. The Indianapolis Times will be the only newspaper in this city to receive these verified logs.
