Puzzle a Day

A poultry dealer of southwestern Ohio, on surveying his coops after Christmas, found that he had sold all his turkeys and ducks, and all his chickens except 100. But his coops of geese were almost full. No one seemed to want them, so he decided to sell them to private individuals.

The first day he sold half of the geese and one half a goose. The second day he sold a third of the remainder and a third of a goose. The third day he sold a quarter of those left and a quarter of a goose. During the last few days before New Year he sold one-fifth of the balance and one-fifth of a goose. He returned one more than he sold on the second day to their coops.

If every customer received a whole goose, how many had he in the first instance?

Last puzzle answer:

The drawing illustrates the words "Basketball Season." That sport is most popular at the college, during the winter months. B plus mask plus feet plus balls plus a plus son plus ale less female equals Basketball Season. By separating these letters you get "Basketball Season."

SMOKE, BUT NO FIRE

When there is an odor of smoke there should be smoke and when there is smoke there should be a fire, but nevertheless firemen who answered a fire call to the Denison, Ohio and Pennsylvania Sts., early today failed to find any trace of fire.

Fire Chief John J. O'Brien said the alarm was sent in when someone smelled smoke.

Tired? No Pep? Just Dragging Along?

Will you give it a chance?

BIG MUNICIPAL DINNER

Mayor to Preside Over Official Family Last Time Tonight.

"No oratory, plenty of food and nothing serious but the annual department reports which we'd set to right if we could."

That's the way J. Carlton Guy, entertainment committee chairman for the annual municipal dinner at the Athenaeum tonight summed up the evening's program. More than 500 city employees are expected to attend the gathering, where Mayor Shank will preside for the last time over his official family.
