

HOOSIER GIRLS LIKE STUDY OF DOMESTIC ARTS

Most Popular Scientific Course in Indiana High Schools.

Of all the scientific courses offered in Indiana high schools, none is more popular than domestic science. It is disclosed in the annual report of Dr. Henry Noble Sherwood, State superintendent of public instruction. That Hoosier girls are eager to learn the rudiments of home-making is borne out in the fact that more high schools are offering domestic science than any other scientific study.

Feel Encouraged
The figures, naturally, are the anathema of professional pessimists, who declare Indiana girlhood is "going to the bowwows, because the young women can't and won't learn to cook and keep house."

Domestic science is being offered in 477 different schools in the State, whereas physics, formerly the most popular scientific course, is taught in 450 schools. Other sciences are taught in the following numbers of schools: Manual Training, 349; botany, 346; physical geography, 253; agriculture, 227; biology, 114; and chemistry, 108.

Manual Training Expensive
The most extensively-taught science, in the matter of necessary equipment, is manual training, an average of $715 being required to equip a single high school. Domestic science costs an average of $140 a school, the least expensive of all.

G. O. P. COUNCIL BREAK LIKELY

Ordinance to Abolish Offices Surprise.

The first break in the ranks of the six Republican councilmen appeared likely today on the question of the ordinance introduced by Councilman Claude E. Negley to abolish the offices of fire prevention chief and stenographer.

A special meeting to consider the issue will be held later this week, it was said. It is known introduction of the ordinance was a surprise to council officers and the six proposed for Mrs. Maude Gupe, Indianapolis stenographer, not manufactured by all councilmen, supported by that organization.

Horace T. Carey, Coffin faction chieftain, would also lose his job, if councilmen do not kill the ordinance. Carey recently instituted a city-wide fire prevention educational campaign. If only two Republican councilmen aid Democrats in opposing the ordinance, it will be lost.

The above is a question worth considering. We nor any other dentist can buy better material than enters into the construction of our work.
