

MINISTER ASKS RIGHT ESTIMATE OF THE CHURCH

The Rev. Shinn Says That Church Is More Than a Repair Man.

"The church, like the air, is a thing that we usually take for granted just because we have it," the Rev. Henderson L. V. Shinn said Sunday at the Immanuel Reformed Church while speaking on "The Ministry of the Church."

"In like manner," the Reverend Shinn said, "we often do not appreciate how soon the best of what is in us would die if the church and what she stands for were taken away."

"May we consider a few of the many good things the church is daily giving us. First of all, the church is the one big brother in the world that always stands committed to the work of helpfulness. A few weeks ago when something got out of order around the house, I asked our little three-year-old girl what we should do about it. 'Why get the fix-man to fix it,' was her reply. And a very sensible reply it was. 'Get the fix-man to fix it.'"

"But do we realize just how often the 'fix-man' is needed in this old world of ours? Things are continually getting out of order; something always going wrong. It is a common thing for somebody to call at the door of the minister for help of one kind or another. The machine of life is broken down and help is needed to make the necessary repairs and get it to running again."

"The soul in need realizes full well that the church or the minister who represents the church is the source to which he can go with assurance that a helpful hand will be given him."

"How many souls are there, hundreds, thousands of them, yea, more than thousands, who would never get through this world if help were not given them in time of need. The church is the one big brother to people in need, the 'fix-man' who is continually repairing the broken-down machine of life."

CALL TO SERVICE

"God calls us for more than to keep ourselves clean and pure. He calls us to stand as a lighthouse of service for others," said the Rev. Edwin W. Dunlavy, pastor Roberts Park M. E. Church, Sunday night on "How to Meet the Storms of Life."

"There is no joy or happiness in the storms of life until we know that we walk with Him. God calls us to stand in the character of our own lives uncorrupted, to show that man can stand foursquare in His great power," he said.

Joseph Ebner and "Babe"

Got the spring fever yet?

Thinking about getting a trailer for the old car and just taking a few things like a tent, bed, stove, rocking chair, four extra tires, two trunks, and enough kitchenery to keep three brides busy?

Well, take a look at Joseph Ebner of Centerton, Ind. Joseph has spring fever, too. But his is simpler. When the weather breaks out into open spring, and the roads aren't too bad for the trim little hoofs of his Arabian broncho mare, "Babe," he's going to be traveling—light.

He and "Babe" are going to four-foot it for Texas and Arizona. And if you're up around Centerton, long about the last of April, you'll be seeing the two of them starting off on a getting-close-to-nature jaunt that will keep them out under the skies for a good many weeks. And all he'll pack along will be a bag of clover like the one he's got tied to the saddle in the picture—and maybe a clean shirt, if there's room any place.

No engine trouble; no gasless-ness; no flat tires. Just "Babe" and Joe starting off like a bride and groom—with "Babe" throwing the shoes perhaps.

Joe has been trying out his steed and came up to Indianapolis to visit his sister, Miss Tillie Ebner, 3027 Boulevard Pl.

SERVICE GIVEN BY MERCHANTS LIGHT COMPANY

Streets Illuminated Earlier Than Called for in Contract.

Real service, a term so often overworked, consists largely in doing the things that do not have to be done and for which the doer is not paid. A practical illustration of service was observed recently. Under the contract with the city for street lighting, the Merchants Heat and Light Company, at that particular time of year was required to turn on its lights at 4:30 p. m.

The day happened to be particularly dark with heavy cloud banks darkening the skies. Shortly after 4 p. m., the skies began to grow so dark that motorists were forced to turn on their lights. Realizing the situation, the company turned on all street lights at 4:30, twenty minutes sooner than the required time. This is just one instance of many in which the Merchants Heat and Light Company seeks to extend efficient service, an official comment.

The growth of a community is in direct proportion to the ability of its electric utilities," he continued. "Under modern conditions, a community and its electric utilities are so interdependent, so closely related, that the interests of one, are the interests of the other."

"Every man, woman and child has a direct personal and financial interest in the situation. With the complexities of city life, the utilities must be in a position to give constant, efficient service. The Merchants Heat and Light Company can and does measure up to this demand."

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR TRANSFER SPRING WORK

"The outlook for spring in our transfer business is very fine," commented R. H. Shinkle, superintendent of the O'Donnell Transfer Company, 437 E. Louisiana St.

This firm which for nine years has done a business of general transfer and heavy machinery moving has a reputation of being the best equipped company in the city to take care of special and heavy machinery. It now is operating seventeen trucks in the city alone, having added several new ones recently. Two five ton trucks are equipped with winches for handling unusually heavy machinery.

"The O'Donnell company constantly is completing big job that require special care in the handling as well as the hauling, where it is necessary to have an experienced crew of riggers who thoroughly understand this work. Recently three vacuum drum dryers of eighty tons each and two twenty-eight foot Louisville dryers of sixteen tons each were dismantled and loaded. The work was done for the Fleischmann Yeast Company of Warren, Ohio, on the order of the Consolidated Products Company of New York.

A typical city job was the hauling of 150 tons of long steel to the new addition of the Real Silk Hosiery Company, on Noble St. In the last few weeks the firm also hauled about seventeen loads of extra heavy machinery for the Midwest Engine Company and put in a large order for the Hoyt Machine Company.

TRANSFER FIRM IN INDIANAPOLIS FOR 38 YEARS

"Takes Brains to Furnish Good Service," Says Central Head.

"For thirty-eight years the Central Transfer and Storage Company has furnished superior commercial service to Indianapolis. During that time each year has found improvement in both our equipment and our personnel. The year 1925 will be no different," said Charles Roesser, who launched the business, now located at 183 S. Alabama St. in 1887.

"Long ago we found that it took more than just men and trucks to successfully furnish an efficient service. It takes the proper equipment, of course, but it also takes brains. Every job presents its own individual problem that must be solved, and it takes men of wide experience in the handling of all kinds of merchandise to successfully handle the job."

"We have both. Our equipment is most modern and our operators are trained men with many years of experience to their credit. We also can place at your disposal a modern, conveniently located warehouse for storage purposes.

"We combine brains, equipment, storage and a reasonable charge. We solicit business for the coming year with the assurance that satisfaction will be given."

Central Transfer has the largest fleet of commercial trucks in Indianapolis. They are uniformly painted green and white and are easily recognized.
