

CONGRESS PEPS UP; HOPE FOR ISSUES SEEN

Belligerency of Democrats Revived After Marked Passivity.

By United Press. WASHINGTON. March 30.—Several incidents of political interest occurred Monday, giving impetus to the congressional campaign which is beginning to stir. They were:

1. Democratic leaders in the Senate opened their fight against the Italian debt settlement, reviving doubt as to final approval.

2. Chairman Shaver of the Democratic national committee outlined the issues on which his party hopes to capture control of the Senate this year.

3. Much activity regarding the prohibition issue was noted. The House passed the Cramton bill placing prohibition enforcement personnel under civil service, sets and dries joining in support of it. Borah proposed to add to the Edge referendum a question as to whether the eighteenth amendment should be modified. Edge only having suggested that voters say whether they wished the Volstead act liberalized within the present limits of the dry amendment. Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement, was announced as the first witness in the Senate beer hearings next Monday. Andrews appointed supervisors for brewery and wine control to reduce leakage in those directions. Senator

LIPSTICKS ARE DOOMED

Health Bureau Head Predicts Milk Fed Girl to Be Popular.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Rouge pots and lipsticks are due to follow the bustle and other feminine aids to charm into retirement if the forecast of Miss Marie K. Johnson, director of the Better Health Bureau, comes true.

"Styles in complexions," Miss Johnson said, "are going to be an natural and the milk-fed girl will come into her own."

Her recipe for beauty is simple: Drink a quart of milk a day, or a pint of rich, germ-free evaporated milk diluted with water, and add an hour's exercise in the sunshine, and continue until he speaks about the bungalow and the climbing roses."

Bruce introduced a proposed constitutional amendment for local option

Farm Compromise

4. Farm representatives offered a compromise surplus disposal bill to the House and Senate Agricultural committees and urge action before adjournment. Norris echoed the demand on the Senate floor.

5. The committee report recommending election of Senator Brookhart of Iowa and seating of his Democratic opponent, Daniel F. Steck, was presented to the Senate and will be acted upon soon after a hot political fight, which may affect the Iowa senatorial election this year.

The most significant of these incidents is the reviving belligerency of the Democrats, who have been singularly inactive this winter. On such questions as confirmation of Thomas F. Woodlock for the interstate commerce commission, the Muscle Shoals commission and tax reduction, the Democratic leadership in Congress, and especially in the Senate, almost disappeared.

Much Criticism

This had caused much underground criticism among Democrats, who felt that their leaders were unduly docile toward the Republicans, who gobbled up enough Democratic votes to win their most critical encounters, such as the fight over the attempted aluminum investigation.

But the orgy of political cannibalism appears to be over and hereafter the Democrats threaten to be much tougher meat.

Shaver's statement is the first word that has come out of the Democratic national committee for months except the announcement several weeks ago that a publicity director had been appointed.

Need Ten Seats

Shaver said a gain of ten seats in the senatorial fights would give the Democrats control of the Senate.

Among the subjects which he predicted would figure in the campaign were the alleged attempts of President Coolidge to influence and coerce members of boards and commissions, the suppression of the aluminum investigation and the forcing by Democratic influence of $60,000,000 more in tax reductions than the Administration originally wanted.

"The true Democrat," Shaver said, "is not castdown but goes on fighting."

Three out of five of the farmers stand ready to vote the Democratic ticket. William A. Cullop, Vincennes, Democratic candidate for the long term United States senatorship, said Monday night, before the Democratic Progressive League.

Cullop warned against big interests gaining control of water power, fuel and transportation of the United States.

Relief for farmers probably will come when the Government forms a big holding company that will regulate, distribute and market surplus farm crops, Cullop asserted.
