

FRUIT PROSPECT GOOD, WALLACE

State Etomologist Looks for Good Crop.

Prospects are good for an excellent fruit crop this year, although there still is a lurking danger from killing weather, according to State Etomologist Frank N. Wallace.

With no damaging frosts thus far and with fair weather reported in the Gulf States, Wallace said he saw little chance for late freezes such as occurred last year. Pointing to the good weather prevailing in Southern States, Wallace said the Gulf weather routine usually repeats itself in Indiana six weeks later. It is not often that a spring frost is severe enough to exterminate a fruit crop, Wallace said. Last year Indiana produced a bumper fruit and grain crop in spite of early summer frosts, Wallace pointed out.

Faction of Commission Said Planning Changes.

Based on information that a faction of the State library and historical commission has held closed meetings, it was reported today at the Statehouse that several departmental changes may be made soon.

Some salary adjustments are said to be proposed to retain Charles Kettleborough, director of the legislative bureau. Kettleborough's original $5,000-a-year salary was cut to $4,000 some months ago, and he tendered his resignation, now pending.

The sum of $500 slashed from the $4,000 salary of Christopher B. Coleman, historical director, may be added to Kettleborough's to appease the latter.
