

KILLS DAUGHTER, SON, ENDS LIFE

Triple Tragedy in Fashionable Section.

By United Press
CHICAGO, May 8.—Despondent over poor health, Mrs. Emily Carlton today shot and killed her son, Alfred, 23, and daughter, Dorothy, 25, and then committed suicide at their home in a fashionable residential district.

John Carlton, the husband, arose early and was working in the garden at the time.

Edwin C. Boswell, candidate for the Republican nomination for juvenile court judge, today announced his withdrawal in favor of Clyde P. Miller.

"I know Mr. Miller's high standing in his chosen profession which was clearly demonstrated when he obtained the highest number of votes cast for all candidates for this office by the Indianapolis Bar Association," Boswell said. "I urge the friends who supported me to vote for Mr. Miller."

ATTACKS THAT LASTED HOURS

Indianapolis Citizen Given
Relief by the Konjola;
Able to Go Back to Work, He Says.

Reports continue to pour in from all parts of Indianapolis regarding the amazing accomplishments of this celebrated medical compound, Konjola, in instances of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel disorders, and rheumatic and neuritic troubles.

MR. ELMER E. GAUBLE

Just a few days ago Mr. Elmer E. Gauble, well known Indianapolis citizen, living at 1240 English Ave., this city, made the following remarkable statement while talking with The Konjola Man, who is at Hook's drug store, corner Pennsylvania and Market Sts., Indianapolis, where crowds call daily to hear his personal explanation of this Konjola medicine.

"I had been suffering for a long time with my stomach," said Mr. Gauble. "Nine weeks ago I had to quit work, as my condition had gotten very bad. I couldn't keep any kind of food on my stomach, as my food would sour and ferment—then raise up into my throat. Following this, I would have an awful burning and raw feeling in my mouth and throat, and these terrible attacks from my stomach would last for hours, so that I would become terribly weak and cold sweat would stand out all over me. I certainly suffered about as bad as anyone ever did with their stomach, and even at nights I was subject to the same misery. In fact, I very seldom slept over two or three hours a night. I had also been troubled with constipation and was told that this had my whole system poisoned and affected, so it is no wonder my general health went down, and as I said, I finally gave up work."

"I heard about Konjola, and how other sufferers in Indianapolis were getting a benefit from this new medicine, so I tried it, and the very first bottle showed me that it was just what I had been needing. Konjola seemed to cleanse my system at once, and it removed the congestion and poisons so that I felt better within a few days. Now, my digestion is good and I am again able to go back to work. It is wonderful how the food which I now eat is building me up. I do not have those awful attacks with my stomach, and I am able to retain what I eat. My appetite is like that of a hungry child, and since I can digest everything I eat, that heavy, bloated feeling is gone, the cold sweats have disappeared and I sleep good at nights instead of suffering as I did before. The pains in my stomach, and burning feeling in my throat, all are gone now, and so, after the blessed relief I have gotten from the use of Konjola, I'm glad to endorse such a fine medicine to the public, for it has put me on my feet after hundreds of dollars worth of other medicines and treatments failed to help me."

The Konjola Man is at Hook's drug store, corner Pennsylvania and Market Sts., Indianapolis, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given. Konjola is also for sale at every Hook drug store in Indianapolis and at drug stores in each nearby town.

BENITO'S FORMULA FOR SUCCESS GIVEN

'One May Go From Hut to Palace if One Is Always Ready to Go Back From Palace to Hut.'

By Milton Bronner
NEA Service Writer
Copyright, 1926, NEA Service
ROME, May 3.—"One may go from hut to palace, provided one is always ready to go back from palace to hut."

This is one of Mussolini's favorite sayings, repeated to me by a close friend of the dictator.

It expresses, perhaps as well as anything could, the formula for success which the iron man of Italy has evolved while on the path to power.

Doesn't Care Who Knows
Mussolini is not at all reluctant that people know of the depths from which he has arisen. Some time ago, a friend of his tells me, Mussolini was in Lausanne, Switzerland. He been quite as much influenced by his reading as by his own experiences. His father, largely self-taught, managed to keep his son in contact with good books despite the pinch of poverty.

And his mother, a village school mistress, was careful to introduce him to the great literature of the world as soon as he was old enough to assimilate it.

Indeed, the first time he was ever away from home was when, as a boy, she took him to Ravenna, where he visited the tomb of Italy's greatest poet, Dante.

Translating for a Pittance
When Mussolini worked as a day laborer he continued to study. He nearly starved to death, a little later on, when he went to Switzerland and studied at the Universities of Lausanne and Geneva—but, hungry and ragged, he imbued the best that the libraries of those great institutions had to give.

As a young man his favorite books were the famous Italian poet Carducci and the great German Heine. At one stage of his career he translated the latter poet into Italian for a publishing house at Milan—getting about as much for this monumental job as an American bricklayer gets for three days work.

A little later, he turned to the poetry, history and drama of ancient Rome. And that is something worth remembering.

It was only a few weeks ago that he stirred Italy and worried the rest of Europe by his speech about Italy's destiny as the successor of imperial Rome. His passionate abhorrence in the deeds of the Caesars is bearing fruit.

But the works that influenced him most of all were the writings of three men he studied after reaching maturity years. They are the works of Machiavelli, the medieval Italian;

Georges Sorel, the Frenchman, and Friedrich Nietzsche, the German.

From Machiavelli he learned the art of politics and government. Mussolini, to be sure, reverses the famous Machiavellian theory of fooling your opponents by saying the opposite of what you mean; Mussolini generally says just exactly what he means, bluntly and without fear. But he learned from the old fox, nevertheless.

Sorel, the father of modern syndicalism, was one of Mussolini's idols in the pre-war days, when he was an ardent Socialist. Sorel taught the desirability of using force to bring about a revolution, and Mussolini preached this doctrine so earnestly that he landed in a number of jails, both at home and abroad.

But when he turned from socialism to conservatism he still remembered Sorel's words about force. This explains the manner in which he rode down all opposition rough-shod and stamped out dissent with an iron heel. Incidentally, Mussolini has fulfilled a prediction Sorel made of him years ago—that some day Mussolini would be found fighting against the Socialists, not for them.

Believes in Destiny
Nietzsche, with his creed of the superman and the will to power, was a philosopher after Mussolini's heart. It was from him, perhaps, as much as from any other one source that Mussolini drew his belief in his star, his conviction that he and his cause were destined to triumph.

At the present time Mussolini reads mostly for utility, studying "fact books" and histories to aid him in the task of governing Italy and getting along with other nations.

A friend of his told me that he once asked Mussolini if he ever read romances. Mussolini replied that he had no time for them. Life itself being romance enough for any man, and adding proudly:

"I shall make my own life my romance and my masterpiece."

The land, in twelve sections along the old Kankakee River bed, must be surveyed before the exact acreage is known.
