Her Own Way

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

A MISTAKE OF THE LAW

"Say, young lady," said the officer as his grip tightened upon my shoulder. "You don't expect me to believe all of this pipe dream do you?"

"I certainly do. I wish you would take me to the station. I'm afraid to go alone."

"All right, I just will run you in."

The policeman pulled me after him to the patrol box and sent me a call.

In a few minutes a patrol wagon came clattering up and I was hustled in. I was dragged unceremoniously into the station house, and the officer told his story, which was that I had come sneaking out of the party after it was closed. I had tried to pass him, but when he would not have it, I had the nerve to tell him that I had been choked and robbed. "I think she had been having a necking party."

The man at the desk, who had a kindly and intelligent face, looked at me suspiciously, and then bent to ward me.

"What is the matter with your neck?"

"I don't know what is the matter with it."

"It is discolored."

I put my hand to my throat. It was very sore to my touch.
