Her Own Way

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

WOMAN'S GREAT VIRTUE

The fact that I had been in danger of being murdered got no sympathy from Mrs. Riley. In fact, unconsciously, I think she would have been glad of it. It would have taken me out of Mamie's sight at least and she was becoming to be rather jealous of my intimacy with Mamie.

"Men don't murder young girls in public parks," she said decidedly. "And if her beautiful bag was stolen I expect it was nothing more than was coming to her. But let her look out for herself. She is altogether too independent for me. I don't want any one around here that is asking my girl to imperil her immortal soul."

"Mother, mother, Judy did not do that. You don't understand," interrupted Mamie.

"Yes, I think I do understand. I understand too much about this girl that you took into my house against my wishes. There is only one of two things a girl can be in this world, and that is either good or bad. There is nothing else."

"All this foolishness about 'voices' and 'checker boards of destiny' is poppycock. I don't know why they mean and I don't want to. But I do know that I am not going to have my daughter running around with that Buddy Tremaine if I can help it. I thought that you had left him and gone to work respectfully. You have been bringing your money home like a good girl and we have been very happy. You know that you are all that I have got with your sister at the sanitarium and Tom spending all his money on that sickly wife of his. Where would we be if you went back to New York and left us? You have been entirely different since this Dean girl has come into the house, and I don't want you to have anything more to do with her. I don't like her, and I don't like her friends."

"Mother, mother, please stop. I'll talk to you in the morning, but I am so tired now that I feel that I could not stand any more. I will say this to you, however, so that you will sleep better. No one, and this includes both Buddy Tremaine and Judy, is going to imperil my immortal soul for the next twenty-four hours at least."

"Well, say your prayers to the blessed saints and thank God that you have got a mother who can keep you on the straight and narrow path. Tomorrow I will bring Father O'Rafferty to see you and he will tell you to think no more about your voice unless you can sing with a pure heart to the glory of God. Good night."

Mrs. Riley shuffled off to bed. (Copyright, 1916, NEA Service, Inc.)

STRAWBERRY JAM

Use fine red berries. Weigh them. Boil for thirty-five minutes, stirring constantly. Add one-half pound sugar to every pound of fruit. Mix well off the fire. Boil again for about fifteen minutes. This is improved by adding one pound white currant juice to four pounds of the strawberries before boiling.

BEING OLD MAN'S DARLING NOT SO GOOD

Back in the prehistoric ages, being an old man's darling wasn't considered such a bad thing. In fact to be taken as bride by the Old Man of the tribe was something for the damosel to think about with interest.

It meant service of a sort from the rest of the tribe, although the Old Man's older wives might make things a bit uncomfortable for one. But we've come a long way from those days. We've come to the conclusion that youth works out its own salvation best with youth. We no longer believe in May and December marriages, even if December is wealthy and powerful socially. We no longer believe in sacrifice. We know that both are intimately miserable. We know that, even under the best circumstances, youth cannot satisfy the cultured, polished, experienced one who is ready to retire into his mind and his home, and let dances and frivolities alone. And we know that age cannot satisfy warm, pulsing, vibrant youth, eager to run, eager to dance, eager to laugh and play. Each has what the other has not—but they can never combine the two across the great expanse of years.

Old Man's Darling

Dear Miss Lee: I am a married woman 32 years old. And have a baby 9 months old. My husband will not let me take my baby to my mother's at all. He says the baby will stay at home with him. My mother never did anything to him but make him that way. His people live close to me and he goes to their house any time he wants to. But I cannot go to my people. And he never does take me anywhere. And when I ask him to let me go to my mother's place is at home. And I keep his house clean and am always ready. He thinks I am his slave. And he makes me do all his housework. But I hate him. He is so mean and hateful. But I am trying to make the best of things as my people don't believe in divorce. But when I see other women who are free, I feel like I am a slave. My sister-in-law said the older he got the worse he would be.

AN OLD MAN'S DARLING.

Like two strangers! How true that is in May and December marriages. No mental points of view the same. One must give up to the other, and it appears that your husband has the strongest will, probably cultivated in the hard, lonely years by himself. He has grown tyrannical as old men will sometimes, trying to force you to his way of living. There is nothing to prevent you from taking your baby to your mother to let her see it, except your husband's unreasonable will. Surely you can be as firm when you are being reasonable! Yes, make the best of things. Cultivate young women friends. Have them in to sew with you or talk with you. And be yourself. Be as sweetly firm as your husband is nastily disagreeable. Unless you wish to really be his slave, you will have to assert yourself now, and perhaps bring some respect for you into his mind and heart.
