

MUSIC, OLD AND NEW, BROADCAST

Feature of Times Fifth Spring Radio Festival.

Old-fashioned music played on old-fashioned instruments, and new music played upon modern instruments were among the features of the fifth spring festival radio program broadcast, by the Indianapolis Times Friday night over WFBM, Merchants Heat and Light Company station, from the studio at the Sevin.

Dr. M. W. Jessup of Greencastle brought his string trio and judging by the many words of praise received, this group will be welcomed back anytime. They played old-fashioned music in the old-fashioned way.

Modern music was presented by two marimba players, Sylvia Echelman and Mamie Ladin, and by Maxie Klezmer, pianist. Encore after encore was asked of these three young artists. They are the children of three sisters of this city.

Mansfield Patrick, guitar player, scored one of the biggest hits of the season. Paul Burton, 11, violinist, showed that he has a real musical future. J. J. Beemer of Greencastle was present with his musical song numbers.

forcement must likewise fall equally upon the same agencies.

75 Per Cent on Job

"I specifically said that at least 75 or 80 per cent of the police were doing their duty. I have always said so, and I said so in the speech that the chief is criticizing. Therefore, there was no wholesale accusation made against the police.

"I did say, and I now reiterate, that politics had played too important a part in the police department. I did say, and I reiterate, that the police department must be divorced from politics, before the result can be attained which the people have a right to expect.

"The chief knows, and we all know, that the men who depend for their livelihood on law violation have a good deal to say about politics in Marion County.

"We know that these men have been called upon for campaign contributions and paid them. We know that the underworld contributes heavily to campaign expenditures. I am quite sure they do not do this from any altruistic or philanthropic motive.

"It is also true that these men are exceedingly fortunate in avoiding arrest and conviction. This may all be coincidence, but I do it.

Federal Raids

"The Federal authorities, in their last raid on Indianapolis, were able to buy intoxicating liquors all over the city. They bought it in about seventy places, all of which were running wide open. They bought it in some instances when police officers were present and who made no arrests.

"The chief complained that I had not referred all these matters to him. The fact that I had not done so does not in the least reflect upon him. I think that if I had referred them to him he would have taken such action as he could.

"But the chief may recall that I did refer the cases of four district men to him a short time ago.

"They were charged with accepting daily presents of liquor from a boozey joint, and permitting it to stay open.

"The evidence was collected by my office. It was presented to the chief. He did his best. He preferred charges. Evidence was strong enough in the opinion of the board of safety, to warrant a finding of guilt, and they did find the four police officers guilty. But they were not removed from the police department. Is it any wonder that I am a little hesitant about doing the same thing with other complaints that I receive?

"But too many complaints are coming into my office of laxity on the part of the police to be ignored. They should be met fairly and thoroughly investigated. Some of them I have placed before the grand jury. That is the reason that I do not care to make them public at this time.

Ready to Act

"The chief has criticised my office for not providing the night man at the city court. I have no appropriation to handle such an emergency. But I am going to require one of my men to remain there at night hereafter.

"That is the spirit in which I am willing to meet any criticism that he may make. I shall immediately take steps to rectify any fault he finds with my office.

"Now, what does the chief do toward cooperating with me? Orders McMurry and McGlen, who have been assigned to my office, back to duty at the police department, leaving me without assistance. They have been doing a valuable service here. No fault can be found with them for their activities. No criticism has been made of their work. But they are recalled, and my office is very greatly crippled as a result.

"Personal differences ought not be permitted to disrupt the prosecutor's office. I feel certain that the chief will not permit them to do so. I feel that he is honestly trying to do his best. I am sure he feels the same about me.

Both Handicapped

"Both of us are handicapped by conditions over which we have no control. It beboes us therefore, to work together and to subordinate personal differences, if any exist, to the work we have to do.

"Concerning the true text of my remarks Thursday night, I have nothing to modify or retract. I talked of conditions that have existed, both past and present. Facts and information I have received I have presented to the grand jury. In due time they will all be brought to light."

CITY POOLS AND BEACHES OPENED

McClure and Thomas Minet, 10, of 1122 S. Belmont St., and Robert Rice, 7, of 2015 W. Wilkins St. They splashed right merrily.

William F. Deakin, custodian at the park, took down the bars and opened the pool, to the great delight of the many boys and girls, while Angelous Pappas, in charge of concessions, sold many bottles of "pop on ice."

To insure the safety of all, twenty-two life guards, all of whom have passed the Red Cross test, are stationed at the pools and beaches this season.

Hot, Sultry Weather

The water offered a welcome relief from the hot, sultry weather. While temperature at 7 a. m. was 71, or 4 degrees above normal, the relative humidity was 75, which is above normal. This made the day seem hotter, United States Weather Bureau officials reported.

Friday afternoon a high mark of 86 was recorded, the highest in some time. It was not a record for the year, as the city has had an 89 for this season. Temperatures today generally were lower than those recorded Friday. Showers and thunderstorms are on the weather menu, and lower temperatures are anticipated by Sunday evening.

The Mid-West generally suffered from intense heat. In Omaha, Neb., it caused the deaths of two persons and prostrated two others. A maximum mark of 98 was recorded there.

Chicago experienced wind, rain and tropical storms, which caused huge property damages and injured more than a score of persons.

Monday the fifty-four city playgrounds, with their swings, slides, baseball diamonds and other facilities for having a good time during the summer will be opened under the supervision of Robert Nipper, former Butler University star athlete, and Mrs. Alice Kessler, who is in charge of the girls.

R. Walter Jarvis, superintendent of parks and George Morgan, assistant superintendent, have been busy getting all parks in shape for the summer, and report "everything lovely." The playgrounds all are ready for the opening.
