

URGES SIMPLICITY IN TRAFFIC RULES

New Attitude on Part of Drivers Needed, Says Todd Stoops, Hoosier Motor Club Manager.

Another contribution to the simplification of traffic was made to day when Todd Stoops, Hoosier Motor Club manager, declared that traffic, like business, is largely a state of mind.

"Traffic does not seem the same to all automobile drivers. Traffic is as congested as drivers want to make it, and experience demonstrates that there is as much mental congestion as there is of the street and highway kind."

Simplicity, Aim

Like the more than eight hundred American Automobile Association clubs with which it is closely affiliated the local car owners' organization aims for greater simplicity in traffic and in traffic control.

"The first step, according to the new viewpoint, is to simplify thought regarding traffic and correct a faulty state of mind. Traffic is much like business in this respect," Stoops pointed out.

Need New Attitude

"If individuals get to thinking that business is not what it ought to be a depression follows eventually, because a man curtails his purchases and abandons his plans for expansion and improvement. It has been my experience that the drivers who complain most of congestion on the streets of the city are those who do nothing to improve it. They never get away from the main streets during the rush hours to make it less confusing than they think it is."

"We need drivers with a better mental attitude toward traffic, men who will use their heads, men who will see how little trouble they can get at congested points instead of getting into arguments and delaying everyone through temperamental gear shifting."

Soul-Maddening Despair Follows a Midnight Adventure

LOOKING back on those terrible events that lie like a black cloud on her memory, Leonora feels that the cause of all her trouble was a foolish desire for excitement and thrills.

"Yet," she says, "had I listened to my mother's wise counsel, I do not believe that dreadful tragedy would ever have happened to me."

Leonora was sixteen when the chance came to join the chorus of a musical comedy, under the watchful eye of her Aunt Enid, who was a member of the company.

"Oh, yes," Leonora says, "there were plenty of men hovering about—plenty of opportunities to get into mischief—had not Aunt Enid watched me so carefully."

And then the handsome Carlos Mendosa entered her little world, and she took the first fatal step that was to lead to tragedy. He attended the show nightly—haunted the stage door—sent her notes and flowers and invitations to dinner.

Leonora's aunt warned her against Mendosa, but she was deaf to these warnings. Her imagination was fired by the man's exotic beauty; his hypnotic gaze lured her uncannily; and one night, after her aunt was asleep, she slipped away from the hotel with another girl of the chorus, and met Mendosa at a little private dinner party given in her honor.

What happened to her during the hideous months that followed that midnight adventure—the hopeless, cruel, soul-maddening despair of it all—is a story that will rend your heart with pity—and fill you with rage that such things can be.

This real-life story, with only the names, dates and places changed, is told in full by Leonora, under the title, "Dark Secrets," in the August issue of True Story Magazine—one of the most gripping, most powerful, most helpful stories that has ever appeared in the pages of this great publication.

"Life's Currents"—They told Ruth that her sweetheart was a crook—that he had come to the little village as a fugitive from justice. But when he took her in his arms and declared over and over again his love for her, she decided that the dark and sinister things said about her lover were lies. They planned to run away—and what happened in the days that followed is an object lesson that no girl can forget.

"Double-Crossed"—It all started so innocently—a gay party of friends—and the moment he found himself clasping the hand of the loveliest girl he had ever met, it was love at first sight for both. The weeks that followed were like a dream. Then came the awakening. A true life narrative fairly packed with heart-throbs.

"Bonds That Cannot Break"—When Sallie married Clark Evans, she loved him too intensely to be jealous of the wife he had recently divorced. But their three weeks' honeymoon was scarcely over before the ghost of her husband's first love reared its terrifying head. She was to learn that a hasty marriage may exact a penalty that few hearts are prepared to pay.

Uses True Story for Sermons on Life

Dear Sirs:

Long life and increased power to you in your efforts to keep before the reading public such a publication as True Story Magazine. Concerning the Ministerial Board of Censors passing on the moral character of the stories you publish—my confidence in and admiration for Bernarr Macfadden is great enough to justify my saying—any publication bearing his name is proof sufficient that it is of a high moral character, Board or no Board!

For many years I have been a careful reader of Physical Culture. Now comes True Story Magazine; and I find my vocabulary inadequate to express how manifold are the helps I have secured from its pages—helps for my pulpit work, to say nothing about the scores of times it has helped me in aiding others in solving vexing problems in their lives. Many of the sermons listed in the enclosed pamphlet can be traced to inspiration found in the many issues of True Story I have read.

I have two other reasons for endorsing True Story, Mary Elizabeth and Frances Leda—my daughters. I unhesitatingly recommend it to clergymen, fathers, mothers, young people, and appeal in its behalf for a place in every church library. Lock Box 156 Bishop Frank E. Patton
