THOSE SMALL FRUITS
Strawberries, cherries, currants and all small fruits that decay rapidly will keep much better if they are removed from the box in which they are purchased and spread out on a platter or flat dish until needed.

UNUSUAL SANDWICH
If you want an unusual sandwich to serve for afternoon tea, try thin slices of nut bread, with a filling of pineapple and cream cheese. Use canned pineapple, drained of its juice and chopped in small chunks.

TO AVOID SHRINKING
Flannels should be washed in several waters, all of the same temperature.

FOR PERFECT LAUNDRY
The ideal ironing board is covered first with a thick pad, then with cotton tightly and smoothly stretched.

Martha Lee Says

HERE'S A HEN THAT HATCHED OUT DUCKLINGS

"Can this be my child?" is what many parents of modern youngsters are wondering now, when they attempt to rear their children along the same lines with which they were reared.

And thereby doing that with the mixture of sagacity and impertinence of modern times, their little fledglings consider themselves full-grown birds, and go flying off on their own business with a sort of patronizing, bringing-up-father attitude toward the parents. Theorists have advanced a number of reasons for this lack of control in modern parents. But the one which seems to me most reasonable is that these young people come by their knowledge so much quicker than did their parents, there is so much in the world and a part of it now, that parents had to learn about after they were grown, that the wonder of knowledge has not touched the young—they simply have it. And furthermore they use it with frank cruelty on their parents. Schools are teaching young girls efficiency in housekeeping and entertaining, that their mothers had to dig out for themselves, sometimes after they were married. Listen to any group of young boys and you'll find they have a knowledge of mechanics, and even of world problems that their parents are just learning. Add to this the fact that a number of parents have been reared with the idea that "it was good enough for us and it's good enough for you," which has closed their minds against innovations, and it is no wonder lots of them feel like the hen that hatched out ducklings and nearly died of hysterics when the downy things took to the pond!

No, you wouldn't quit on the job like that. If you'll just open up that closed mind against these modern youngsters of yours and try to see them marching on, you'll be lots happier. I certainly regret the impertinence of modern times, but there's no doubt about it, children are making more rapid strides toward knowledge than they ever have before, and let's not begrudge it them. You don't know how to manage that daughter of yours. Let her bring home her knowledge and try it out herself on your household. How do you know it won't work until you have tried it? Don't let a breach come between you. Keep her interest in you and your household by letting her work out her knowledge there. Work together. Keep an open mind. Get the boys to tell you what they're thinking about and planning. You'll probably find they can tell you something as well as you can tell them things. Let your home be a clearing house for innovations. It's worth it to keep closely in touch with your children.

Ducklings
Dear Martha Lee, a mother of three—two boys, 18 and 12, and a girl, 13, and really sometimes I believe they're my children at all. They have such totally different ideas and they

Her Own Way A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

MONEY NEVER BUYS PEACE

"Forgive me, Judy," said Mamie Riley. "You have a right to reproach me. You have believed in me when things looked more suspicious than that. I might have known if you were in the Robinson car even with Mr. Robinson you would have some good reason for it."

"What is it, Judy?" she asked. "What is it all about?"

"Well, my dear, things are pretty bad at this time. I am just wondering if the thing I am thinking of is not quite as bad in its way as what you suspected."

"What do you mean, Judy?"

Mamie came over to where I was sitting before my dressing table and looked over my shoulder into the glass. Our eyes met in the mirror, clashed and melted together.

I turned, rose, and putting both hands on her shoulder I gently forced her into the chair in which I had been sitting and drew up another in front of her.

"That is just what Joan told me last night. She said that everyone in town would think that her troubles were trivial. Mamie, she has everything that money can buy but happiness. Money isn't able to buy that for her. And now today when it might buy her peace of mind, she is not able to put her hands on enough of her own money to do it."

"Joan Meredith must have fifty thousand dollars before 10 o'clock tonight or her whole future will be ruined."

"Great heavens, Judy! What is she going to do?"

"That is just what she asked me. The most tragic thing about the whole thing is that it would be perfectly easy for her to get fifty thousand dollars for some piece of jewelry that means nothing to her. It really means more than life or death looks practically impossible."

UPHAUS-TAYLOR WEDDING PRETTY HOME CEREMONY

Marriage Takes Place at Residence of Bride's Parents.

Miss Edna Theresa Uphaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Uphaus, 31 Hendricks Pl., was married to Andrew Taylor, at the home of her parents, Friday evening. The house was decorated with flowers and greenery and the Rev. F. M. Stone read the ceremony before an altar of palms and ferns, lighted with tall cathedral tapers.

As the guests were arriving, Miss Emma Hoening, pianist, played a group of bridal airs. Preceding the entrance of the bride party, Miss Patra Kennedy sang "At Dawning" and "Until." As the bride and her attendants came down the stairs March from "Lohengrin."

Pretty Gown
Prettily gown in Nile green georgette, lace trimmed, and carrying a bouquet of Ophelia roses, Miss May Taylor, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor. Miss Irene Meek was bridesmaid and wore a gown of pale yellow georgette and carried Columbia roses. Little Charlotte Griggs, flower girl, dainty in sheer white georgette, carried a French basket of pink rosebuds, and little Bobbie Lawson, in white silk broadcloth, carried the ring in a calla lily. Harry Uphaus, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride made a lovely picture in a gown of white bridal satin, trimmed with Chantilly lace. The full skirt of the gown was trimmed with tulle and lace and caught with clusters of orange blossoms.

Pearl Trimmed Veil
Her veil was fashioned with insets of Chantilly lace, trimmed with seed pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. A reception followed the ceremony and the dining room was lighted with white tapers.

The centerpiece for the table was made of a plateau of smilax and ferns, with a large wedding cake in heart of this sprightly housewife-mayor.

Defends Youth
"Most decidedly," she declared. "They are not going to the dogs. I have a daughter and I made a good job of her."

"The grandmothers of these young people were every bit as bad. Their grandmas were human beings, too."

"Whether this increasing liberty we're giving our youngsters will in time cause a breakdown in morals is a question. Morals certainly will not break down, though, if mothers remain companions to their daughters and exercise a little sadly needed understanding."

"And petting?"

"Well, if they must 'pet' it should be done in the home and not in packed automobiles. I'm firm on that point and Richmond has an ordinance, anyway, prohibiting it."

the center. The bride's mother, Mrs. Frank Uphaus was gown in gray georgette and wore a corsage of Sweetheart roses. Mrs. Taylor, mother of the groom, wore moss green and a corsage bouquet of Mrs. Aaron Ward roses. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left on a motor trip to Winnipeg, Canada. At-home announcement will be made later. Out-of-town guests included Messrs. and Mesdames P. R. Lawson, John Uphaus and Mrs. Julia Long, all of Terre Haute; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wulley, Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Shire, of Chicago.
