

PRETTY WEDDING CEREMONY HELD BY CANDLE LIGHT

Meneley-Striebeck Nuptials Solemnized at Church.

Miss Charlene Meneley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Meneley, 2641 Central Ave., was married to Forrest Jason Striebeck of Saginaw, Mich., at a pretty candle light service at the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening. The ceremony was read by the Rev. J. Ambrose Dunlap before an altar lighted with branch tangleblossoms and banked with greenery. Paul R. Matthews, organist, played a group of bridal airs as the guests were assembling, including "At Dawning," "Oh, Promise Me" and "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." As the wedding party entered, the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was softly played. Harry N. Striebeck, brother of the bridegroom, and Larry C. Neidlinger were ushers. Donald McNew was best man.

Matron of Honor

The matron of honor, Mrs. Larry C. Neidlinger, was crowned with a blue georgette, fashioned with basque waist and circular skirt, with scalloped hem. Leon Cohen, Jr., of Fortville was ring bearer and was dressed in white satin.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white bridal satin, fashioned with tight bodice and full skirt, with a panel of chantilly lace down the front of the gown. A wreath of orange blossoms held her veil in place and she carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Home in Michigan

The out-of-town guests included Dr. and Mrs. Henry Stahl, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Emerson F. Cohen, Fortville; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Cohen, Sr., Fortville; Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Offerman, Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Keller, Ft. Wayne; Mr. and Mrs. William Davis, Newcastles; Mrs. Russell Koehle, South Bend; Mrs. Morris Peters, Mulberry; Miss Ruth Gregory, Clayton.

Mr. and Mrs. Striebeck left immediately on a motor trip to northern Michigan and will be at home later at Saginaw, Mich.

The trimmings were cream lace and alternate bands of light green satin on the skirt and a touch of the cream lace at the bodice and on the train. She wore a string of pearls and the bridegroom's gift, a diamond ring. On her head she wore a transparent pink green picture hat and carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her Own Way A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

JOAN GETS A SHOCK

I realized, however, that I had no time to moralize. I must get out of that office immediately. I must not only see Joan, but Lela.

Hastily taking the bottle with its red seal and crossbones from my pocket I put it on the bundle of papers and made my way out through the outer room to the elevator and out of the store.

Going to a telephone booth I called up Joan on her own private wire, the number of which she had given me the night before. Her maid answered: "Miss Meredith is still sleeping. May I take the message?" "Yes," I answered. "Wake her and say that Miss Dean is waiting on the phone for her."

"I cannot give her that message now, Miss. I have strict orders not to enter her bedroom in the morning until here bill rings."

"But she must be up by this time of day. It is nearly noon!"

"Yes, miss," answered the maid phlegmatically. "I thought I heard her walking about."

"Then knock at her door and give her my message."

"I couldn't possibly do that until she rings," she informed me again.

"All right," I answered. "You may give her the message any time today or next week, whenever it comes easy for you."

Before I had time to hang up I heard the words in a frightened voice. "Wait. Wait, here comes Miss Meredith."

"Hello, hello, is that you Judy?"

"It's Joan's voice and I drew a long sigh of relief."

She might have been answering a girl she expected to ask to the matinee for all the anxiety her tone conveyed.

"Yes, Joan, it's Judy," I answered. "Want you to come downtown swimming?"

"You want me to come to the store, Judy? Have you got the money?"

"No."

"What do you mean? Can't you get it?"

There was a sudden change in the voice. As I had expected Joan last night had put all her troubles on my shoulders. She was so used to being protected and help that by merely telling me her troubles she had become sure that I would take care of her.

Now, however, her voice was full of anguish and I hastened, as I thought, to relieve her mind as soon as possible by telling her that Barry Cornwall was dead.

Before I could get any further I heard a queer sound as though the checkbook was dropped and I was shut out.

"Central, Central," I fairly shouted. "I have been cut off!"

WE BULLY THE PEOPLE WHO DISAPPOINT US

Martha Lee Says

We're all Bill Sykeses at heart. We all have a tendency to bully the loved folks who disappoint us in some degree, or who give us an inferiority complex.

It's human nature to want to irritate, annoy, and distress somebody, who seems superior in wisdom and intelligence into committing an error or a blunder which will perfect. For none of us can tolerate near-perfection in our contemporaries. It's such a road-headed thing to do, yet most of us are guilty of it.

And another reason we do it, is because we set up idols in the persons we love, and when we discover they have feet of clay, or when they fail to come up to our expectations mentally and morally our tendency is to take out our hurt on them—hold them responsible for some way and thus be unreasonably vicious in little things.

It's small and horrid in us. And we need to catch a glimpse of ourselves in our mental mirrors to correct the fault and try to go through life pleasant and amiable in spite of disappointments.

Unreasonable

Dear Miss Lee: I often read your column and I saw where so many women had trouble in their families and you for advice. Now my husband and I am the same age. He is always coming on me like a child. Now he knows when I married I couldn't have any children. He says he is glad when they are gone. Against the would raise children his head would be whiter than it is at common labor. He doesn't seem to want to have anything only care and put the money in the bank and I keep rooming and bring in so much money as he does and I think I am old enough to know how to manage a home. I never get anything to wear. Just to keep down trouble and keep up the battle. I don't know what to do. I am sure to change. BETTIE ANN.

Now, Nettie Ann, the thing for you to do is to go calmly and sweetly on your way and pay no attention keeping roomers then you are entitled to at least a part of what you earn for your own personal needs and there's no reason why you shouldn't take it. As for the children, I doubt if, really and truly, he would care about having any, but for some reason or another you disappoint him in some way. Either you aren't the jolly good company he figured on, or you're too jolly to make him comfortable or some little thing like that, and he's taking out the hurt to his own judgment and ego by nagging at you. If you pay any attention to this pettiness, you'll make him worse. If you ignore it and, maybe, sing when he begins to talk disagreeably, he'll soon find out it isn't as fun to argue with some one who won't argue back—and peace will eventually be restored.
