

EUROPE THINKS U. S. HEARTLESS MONEY-GRABBER

American Writers See War
Possibility as Hatred Grows.

By Times Special
LONDON, July 23.—Uncle Sam, a few years ago welcomed to Europe as a vigorous, open-hearted young fellow come to help the old world out of its great trouble, is today pictured here—and elsewhere, in Europe—as a grasping old curmudgeon trading on the poverty of the world.

Irresponsible European writers describe him as a world menace, a few American writers see in this the possibility of a future war for the United States.

A Survey

Following is the situation in Great Britain, outlined as accurately as possible after investigation and observation in private as well as official circles:

1. The United States, as an impersonal, somewhat vague institution, is perhaps the most unpopular of great powers.

2. Americans personally, American officials and ordinary people from the United States, are not so unpopular and are well received.

3. The British Government and the American Government are most friendly and will remain so if Great Britain has anything to say about it.

Sold World a League

There is no doubt about America's unpopularity as a world power. America sold the old world a League of Nations, say Englishmen, and then refused to join it. She has most of the world's money, they continue, and she wants it all; today she presses Europe to pay impossible debts, and many of her statesmen would have Great Britain pay damages done American shipping in a blockade which America herself adopted and even intensified when she herself belatedly entered the war.

The Englishman making $1,600 pays $12.50 a year income tax; on $3,000 he pays $162.50; on $5,000 he pays $500; on $10,000 he pays $1,500; on $50,000 he pays $15,000. And he blames the United States every time he pays.

Curse United States

People of all classes cursed the United States when Senator Borah broached his plan to have Great Britain, in addition to her war debt, pay millions of dollars for blockade damages. "This move was resented officially and by people who didn't even read the stories about it, but who just set it down as another of 'Uncle Sam's dirty little games.'"

But there is a bright side to the picture. British people, strictly speaking, do not regard Americans as foreigners. American visitors here are surprised to find that British newspapers index news as domestic, Dominion, American and foreign. Recently a British captain at Southampton rebuked an American member of his crew by telling him he "acted like a bloody foreigner."

Expect More

This means that the British people expect more of Americans than they do of ordinary foreigners. When a "foreign" nation does something the British resent, they simply get angry, when the United States does a similar thing, they are hurt as well. The complicated question of unpopularity is reflected in the movies. British people hate American films as an institution, particularly because they frequently distort British life, but generally because they kill British films. Newspapers viciously attacked the "Big Parade" because it showed the American Army and didn't mention the British army's part in the war.

Sailors Fraternize

American and British sailors show the spirit of friendship that exists between the nationals of the two nations. There is an American battleship in port now. Sailors from it are walking arm in arm along the streets with British soldiers and sailors. They may have a few friendly fights, but British sailors would not fraternize at all with sailors of most other nations, if for no other reason than because they could not talk to them. Language, after all, is a fundamental point of agreement between the United States and Great Britain.

DIVIDE BEGGAR'S GOLD

By United Press
MEXICO CITY, July 23.—A fortune of several thousand pesos was left by a blind beggar woman, Loreta Rodriguez, on her death here. Learning of her death neighbors gathered and divided the money without recourse of legal tribunals. Several jars filled with gold coin were carried away.

Red itching blisters on baby's face healed by Resinol

"My baby had eczema for three months and nothing seemed to do him any good until I tried your product. His cheeks were red and covered with blisters, and the itching was so annoying that he could not sleep. After reading your ad in the paper I purchased a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap. Only a few applications stopped the itching entirely and within a week the redness was gone and his skin practically clear. Your ointment is really wonderful and I will praise it to everyone."
