Y. W. C. A. Notes

Winners of the contests of the Junior Swimming Club at their meeting Thursday afternoon were Lucille Mills winner of the 60-yard free style; Misses Katherine McManus and Johanna Myers, wrestling; Miss Jean McKay, Pom Pom Pullaway, and Harry Miles the dog paddler.

Many of the guests who have enjoyed the beauty of Camp Delight are signing up for dinner on week days going from their work to enjoy again the wonderful evenings.

Among the interesting events of the week were a ring-lett tournament which gave Miss Irma Kahn the championship to date. A surprise birthday party was given for Miss Isadore Clissold with a birthday cake, ice cream. After much fun, Miss Clissold found her present by following a spider web all over the camp.

A number of special private groups have had dinner at the lodge, including the staff of the Family Welfare Society, a party of fifteen from the State Life Insurance Company and a group from the business section of the Women's Department Club.

The program for the week-end is to be in charge of the Health Education Department under the direction of Miss Louise E. Noble; a schedule of interesting things has been planned. A baseball game, entertainment by a group from the Health Department, a moonlight hike are included in this schedule.

A morning worship will open the service for Sunday and a lovely novelty hike will be part of the program for the day.

Martha Lee Says

THE ONE YOU KNOW BEST YOU LOVE MOST

Dan Cupid is none other than Proximity disguised in the nude and equipped with a bow and arrow. Granted there are some folks you couldn't possibly fall in love with, still it's the person with whom you associate most intimately that you marry.

Moreover, it's this same person, with whose tastes and preferences you grow acquainted through pleasant association, whom you are happiest with. Yellow-backed novels to the contrary, the manufacturer's son does not marry and live happily ever after with the factory hand's daughter. There's not enough similarity of tastes to make the things possible for any length of time. Sex attraction, yes. Love, no.

Thus proper selection is a matter of being with the proper people. What every mother of eligible daughters knows, consciously or subconsciously, is that her fair offspring simply has to move in the right circles of the F. F. V. sons if she is going to capture one of these special plums. Otherwise, if she is thrown too constantly with a good-looking chauffeur he's liable to be her choice!

Two Arrows

Dear Miss Lee: I am a working girl employed in a big department store. Recently the son of one of the officials has been asking me to lunch and to dance, and I've been going steady with a young fellow who lives where I do. He's a very nice young man and I like him, but he is just a working boy like myself. Should I quit this young man and let this other fellow go steady with me? Do you think he is serious? I would like to marry GRETCHEN.

Story book romances seldom come true in life, Gretchen. I think you'd better stick seriously to the young man who has taken his place in your life by virtue of your similar backgrounds, and tastes. I believe that anything is possible—but so many things are improbable, and there's so much misery attached to attaining them that some of them aren't worth while. And since love is such a fragile thing and based greatly on mutual tastes and understanding and companionship, and I'm afraid you'd find your bubble

He Got Fresh

Dear Miss Lee: I am 17, good-looking, dress nice, have plenty of friends all the time. I don't care to run around, very seldom go to a dance, never a public one, and very seldom to a party. I never saw a thought about any fellow until two years ago I met a fellow that I now care a great deal about. We both cared about each other. He was nice, sweet, everything a real nice girl wants. He and I went to school together for two years, then suddenly he changed. He got fresh, said it was the end and we split. Miss Lee, should I write him, or do you think he will come back? He has asked me through a letter to forgive, but I know he won't ask me for a date. STUBBLE.

Why so pessimistic? I think he will come back. He's found out you can't be trifled with and his respect for you has mounted a good deal higher. Now he wants to be forgiven, and so forgive him. Drop him a note, unless you have seen him and told him verbally, and tell him you do forgive him, and since he feels that way about it once more, you'd love to see him again.

PLENTY OF PEP

By Tatted Pines
EVANSTON, Ill., July 24.—Chester Levere, 56, celebrated his first wedding anniversary by skipping the rope 10,000 times, and when he got through with that he took a five-mile swim in Lake Michigan.

Her Own Way A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

PITY IS AKIN TO LOVE

Jerry said this almost in a breath as he stood on the public street holding my hand.

I looked up into his face, and a warm contented feeling came over me as I looked at him with admiration. "This upstanding person is my man," I said to myself. "He loves me. He wants to marry me."

I think, if I had not promised to meet Joan, I would have gone with Jerry Hathaway to luncheon. But such was my feeling at the time that I knew I would have told him that I would marry him as soon as he wished me to. Sometimes I have wondered what would have happened if I did.

As it was, I caught a sight of Mr. Robinson coming down the street, and I was so afraid that he would see me with Jerry or Joan that I rushed back into the drug store where I had been telephoning and out on a side street.

I never said good-bye to Jerry at all. In fact, all the way to the Congress in the taxi, which I fortunately found standing vacant at the door, I kept asking myself if I had done the right thing.

I was sure Jerry saw Mr. Robinson. He would put two and two together and jump at the right conclusion, which was that I was trying to avoid him.

I knew that, notwithstanding the fact that Jerry said he would trust me, there was a little doubt lingering in his mind. For some reason he was jealous of Mr. Robinson.

I told myself that I would never be jealous of anyone, as it was a sure sign of an inferiority complex.

Smilingly, I went into the Congress Hotel lobby. I saw Joan immediately and I forgot everything but her and the wife of Barry Cornwall.

Poor Joan's face was so white and drawn that I pitied her from the bottom of my heart, but before I had time to tell her she came forward with tears rolling down her cheeks.

"Judy, is it true?"

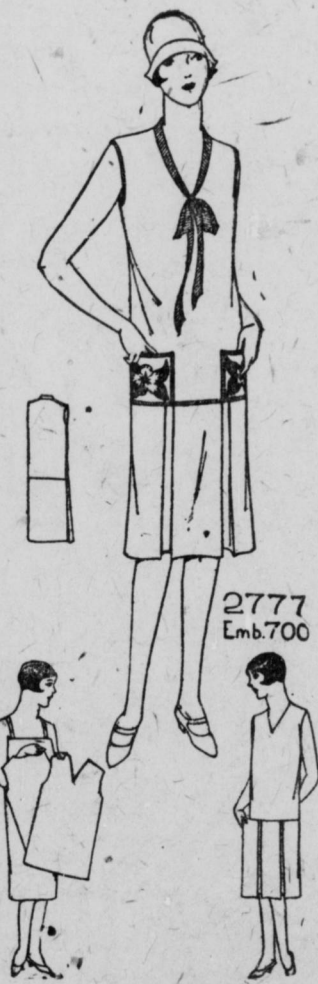

"Yes, dear, and you should be forever grateful."

"But, Judy," she whispered, "I loved him."

"Surely not after the way he treated you," I said.

"Yes, I did. One cannot tell why one loves or why one does not love. Barry could have made a splendid man if the fate had not been against him. You know he went to France when he was seventeen years old and was gassed at Chateau Thierry. When he came back he couldn't do any hard work and he didn't have much education. There was one thing he could do. He could dance."
