Only Intimates Admitted to Bier—Police Guard Funeral Parlor.

LARGE CROWD OUTSIDE To Bury Actor Where Friends Desire, Says Brother.

By United Press
NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Rudolph Valentino is in peace today.

Up in the splendor of the gold room of the Campbell funeral home here, the movie actor, who died Monday, rested in his silver-brouse casket, flowers of his friends around him and the quiet of death in the room.

The door was locked. The casket was kept closed. There was not a living person in the room except when, at intervals, the door was unlocked and some former associate of Valentino walked slowly through and to the bier.

Statement on Burla
Meanwhile, word was received that Alberto Guglielmi, Rudolph's brother, before boarding the White Star liner Homeric in Paris for New York, had announced that the wishes of Valentino's American friends will determine the last resting place of the star's body.

"If they desire the body to remain in the country in which his great qualities were developed," Alberto said, "that will be done. Otherwise he will be buried in Italy."

Valentino had at last been removed from the confusion which 75,000 curious people had created up to midnight Wednesday, which had amazed not only Valentino's friends, but much of the world.

Outside Different
Outside the funeral chapel the scene was different.

One hundred fifty police paced the three blocks around the funeral building keeping watch on 2,000 persons who gathered there despite the announcement that no longer would the public be admitted. They demanded entrance, but the police kept them moving. About half of the crowd was composed of girls and women. They carried umbrellas against the rain, or newspapers to cover their hats. They refused to leave the district, but police would not permit them to stand. So the 2,000 milled

RULES COUNCIL CAN FIX RATE FOR TAX LEVY

Majority Faction to Slash $50,000 From Lighting Budget.

CITY council has power to set the tax levy for 1927, regardless of recommendation of City Controller William Buser, Alvin J. Rucker, city corporation counsel, ruled today.

Buser last week submitted a budget for 1927 to council providing for a tax rate of $1.035. He declared council could cut the budget and tax rate, but not raise them.

The ruling of Rucker gives council authority to disregard Buser's recommendations and raise the appropriations for various departments and the tax rate.

Majority faction members of council are working on the budget, considering the various items preparatory to a special council session tonight when it will officially act on it again.

In caucus they decided to reduce the proposed appropriation of $350,000 for city lighting to $200,000 at the request of Councilman Walter R. Dorsett, who recently went about the highways to spot the bright lights that prevail in residential districts where houses are many blocks apart.

Declaring that the ruling of Rucker also would forestall the necessity of readjusting the budget, councilmen set the night of Sept. 3 for public hearing and said they would take final action Sept. 6.

Majority faction members were jubilant at Rucker's ruling.

"The power of this council has never been tested, but we are going to test it now," said Boynton J. Moore, president.

By United Press
SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 26.—The application for bail presented in behalf of William Stevens and Henry Carver, charged with murder in the reopened Hall-Mills investigation, today was denied by Supreme Court Justice Parker.

Hall and his choir-singer, sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Judge Cleary today sat on the bench with Justice Parker.

When the hearing opened, Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, informed the bench that a card bearing the fingerprints of one of the three defendants in the case was found near the bodies. Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, the slain clergyman's widow, also is charged with the murder.

HERE'S WHY VOTERS DO NOT VOTE

'Politics Is Rotten,' Opinion of Many, Committee Survey Shows.

WOMEN MAKE REPORT 1,000 Are Interviewed by League Workers.

"Politics is rotten."

"Candidates and politicians are all alike, and all crooks."

"I'm disgusted! What's the use?"

These were the underlying reasons for the large stay-at-home vote in the 1925 Indianapolis city election, according to a survey by the efficiency in government committee of the Indianapolis League of Women Voters.

The committee, composed of Miss Alma Sickler, chairman; Mrs. Frank J. English and Mrs. LeRoy Kahler, interviewed 1,000 nonvoters.

Reasons Given

In a report to directors of the league they submitted the following reasons given by nonvoters for not voting:

Illness, 8 per cent.

Absence from city, 15 per cent.

Indifference, 24 per cent.

Neglect, 12.5 per cent.

Disgust with own party, unwilling to vote other party 3.5 per cent.

No satisfactory candidates, 7 per cent.

Favored candidate couldn't win, 7 per cent.

Uninformed, 3 per cent.

Miscellaneous, 12 per cent.

Not voting because "politics is rotten" was termed the "quitter reason" by the committee women. They made the following comment regarding it:

"It is a hard attitude of mind to combat. It is primarily the quitter attitude, and, as every one knows, very little progress has ever been made by quitters as a class."

They urged that this attitude be combated.

The fact that there were 70,000 more registrations than votes is somewhat misleading, according to the report, as there were numerous duplicate registrations of persons who had moved during the summer.

"When all allowances are made, however, the number of nonvoters remains far too large to indicate a good condition in our city political life," the report continues.

Haven't the Habit

Many who were ill or absent could have used absent ballots to point out. Women for the most part were ill and men absent. Women outnumbered men two to one in the matter of indifference. Some women refused to vote for anything less than President of the United States and others told the committee that they "didn't have the habit."

The committee has no theory to advance, as to why the interest in national affairs should be greater than in local.

"Disgust with party" was accounted for by the committee in the fact that the Ku-Klux Klan was a factor in the election.

Men more often than women are afraid of "losing their vote" by supporting a candidate who is likely to be defeated, they declared.

"Many of our nonvoters in this group are anti-Klan Republicans, too much opposed to the Klan to vote a Republican ticket, but too loyal to their party to vote the opposing ticket, the report said. "A sprinkling of Klan Democrats, too loyal to their party to vote against it, but too interested in the Klan to vote against it ticket it advocated, is also found here."

The committee was reported to have "paired" with her husband. They were on opposite sides and both agreed to refrain from voting. The committee women learned from the poll-books that the man voted, however.
