

WILL OPEN DRIVE FOR OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL ON SEPT. 8

Luncheon to Be Given—Sponsored by Department Club Group.

At a luncheon Sept. 8 at the new Chamber of Commerce Bldg. a campaign will be opened for an Opportunity School, to be conducted in cooperation with the Indianapolis public schools. The project is being sponsored by the home and education department of the Woman's Department Club, cooperating with leading organizations. Mrs. Frank J. Lahr is chairman of the department.

Entirely different from the usual trade vocational school, the Opportunity School provides training for boys and girls above compulsory school age who wish to be fitted for work for which they have a special inclination, and for untrained men and women who are handicapped through lack of education and proper vocational training.

To Produce Statistics

Some interesting statistics will be produced and a discussion of local economic and social problems will follow short speeches at the luncheon. Workers with Mrs. Lahr and her committee are Mrs. E. J. Robinson, president of the Woman's Department Club; Mrs. Herbert F. Atwood, chairman of the Seventh District Federation; and Mrs. O. C. Lukens, president of the Indianapolis Local Council of Women.

Invitations to the luncheon have been sent to 250 leading citizens. "It is hoped," said Mrs. Lahr, "that others to whom invitations have not been sent will become interested in this movement and express their interest by attending the luncheon and placing early reservations."

Principal to Come Here

An early visit to Indianapolis by Emily Griffith, principal of the Opportunity School in Denver, is planned. More than 9,000 persons studied in the Denver school last year, the average daily attendance being 3,500.

Los Angeles now is completing a $1,000,000 Opportunity School similar to the one at Denver, and Detroit, Mich., has a school in operation.

Sister Mary's Kitchen

BREAKFAST—Orange juice, cereal, thin cream, puffy omelet, graham and raisin muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Cream of tomato soup, croquettes, apples with rice, lemonade.

DINNER—Salisbury steak with baked bananas, rice potatoes, jelly, cabbage salad, huckleberry pie, bread, milk, coffee.

Very often the dessert planned for a luncheon for young children furnishes much nourishment. In this meal in particular the dessert of rice and apples served with sugar and cream makes almost a full meal for a child under 6 years of age. With the cream of tomato soup and crisp croquettes the diet is ideal.

Apples With Rice
One-fourth cup rice, 2 cups milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 1 1/2 cups sugar, 1 cup boiling water, 6 apples, currant jelly.

Cook rice in milk and salt in double boiler until tender. Beat eggs well with 1/2 cup sugar and stir into rice mixture. Cook until thick, 10 or 15 minutes. In the meantime, pare and core apples and cut in halves, crosswise. Make a syrup of remaining sugar and water by boiling them together for four minutes. Add apples and simmer until tender. Care must be taken not to let the apples break during the cooking. Put a layer of rice in a serving dish and cover with halved apples. Cover with another layer of rice and cover with apples. Pour any syrup left from cooking the apples over them and drop a spoonful of jelly in the center of each. Chill thoroughly and serve with cream.

PITCHERS

Milk or cream allowed to stand in pitchers will accumulate an ugly yellow crust. Pour the liquid back into bottles and replace caps.

Fresh Air Makes Boy Husky

Plenty of fresh air is given credit by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Manhart, 2454 Central Ave., for the health record of their son, Robert Audley, who is 10 months old and weighs twenty-five pounds.

So plainly in my mind's eye was his image planted that I even caught myself painfully trying to smile back into those tortured eyes.

I must have been silent longer than I expected, for I found myself again listening to Mr. Hathaway, who was repeating his question.

I looked around quickly to see if the apparition my brain had called up was still standing by the mantel. It was not there and I answered with perfect honesty:

"I don't know."

Then such is the perversity of one's brain that the moment I spoke the pleading eyes and sympathetic mouth of Jerry Hathaway arose suddenly before me.

I had come nearer loving Jerry Hathaway the night before as we had stood in that spring-scented garden, than I had been since I was born.

Then I thought if he had asked me in so many words I would have given him my promise, but this morning I could not see myself married to him at all.

"I'll not worry you any longer, Mr. Hathaway," I said, with my eyes on the transmitter. I did not want to see either of the men whose pictured faces my mind had called up.

"Will you please tell Jerry to call me up at Mamie's. I'm going over their right away."

"Yes, I'll tell him, but, my dear girl, you must think that over. Gerald Hathaway is not to be lightly refused by any girl, provided his father favors his son's choice."

Remembering that Mr. Hathaway, Sr., had tentatively tried to make me feel that his son's attentions were purely without intention, I could not for the life of me refrain from asking:

"Are you intimating, Mr. Hathaway, that you approve of me as the wife for your son?"

"Come over to the office after luncheon and I will tell you—or better still, I'll meet you and Jerry at the Beaux Arts tonight for dinner and we'll celebrate your betrothal then."

Before I could tell him that I was not going with Jerry to the Beaux Arts he had rung off.

When I got to Mamie's and told her the whole story she said I had no business to tell Mr. Meredith that I would go with them when I had already made a date with Jerry.

Her Own Way

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY
WHAT ABOUT JERRY?
"But, Judy, aren't you going to marry Jerry?" asked Mr. Hathaway in a surprised voice.

I do not know why when Mr. Hathaway asked me that question the sight of John Meredith should rise up in front of me, but it did.

So plainly in my mind's eye was his image planted that I even caught myself painfully trying to smile back into those tortured eyes.

Martha Lee Says KEEP THE HOME BOAT SAILING ON

The hand at the wheel—the hand that keeps the family boat running in the proper channel, belongs more often than not, to the wife and mother.

It is through her loyalty to the home, her faithfulness to the charge imposed upon her, her unfailing feminine intuition, that she is able to keep the family ship from striking upon the rocks. Being true to her trust, a mother's love has held many a home together, even though her life-partner's attitude may have been one of pronounced irresponsibility.

Break Up the Home?
Dear Martha Lee: I have a daughter 15 years about the boy I love. I ask them here to the house as I'm married. I don't see how I can get along. My father is away from home many ways and I don't see how I can get along. I don't see how I can get along. I don't see how I can get along.

No. Stick to the ship. Your influence is far more powerful than your husband's upon this growing girl. Use every means to make your daughter feel that you are her understanding chum.

It is a weak effort to strike fear into a child's heart, and isn't wise ever. You'll have to be brave, because the straight and happy sailing of this home boat seems to be largely in your hands, but you'll have much satisfaction in some time viewing a well-dressed and well-mannered young man.

A lawyer tells me, that as the court gave you the boy unconditionally the own father has no more jurisdiction over him and cannot interfere with the proposed adoption. You are very fortunate to have found so good a help-meet and father for your boy. You are not compelled to let the former husband see the boy unless you wish.
