

DO YOU KNOW HOW TO PICK A THANKSGIVING TURKEY?

Housewives Advised to Be Sure to See if Fowl Has Plenty of Flesh on Breast, Back and Hips—Examine It With Its Back Up—How to Cook It Told.

By Dorothy Stephenson

Back in the New England days the Pilgrim shoulder-armed his musket, went out into the woods and banged away at the fattest turkey he came across. And he was assured a good Thanksgiving Day dinner.

Today the modern housewife obtains her turkey at the butcher shop. She has to take the word of the butcher that the fowl is plump and sweet, unless she knows herself. And most housewives don't. Consequently Uncle Sam has come to her rescue.

Speaking through the Agricultural Department, Uncle Sam advises housewives to be sure and ascertain the amount and quality of flesh on the body, especially on the breast, back and hips. Experts say to examine the bird with its back up, as this is the best way to tell how plump it is. To insure a moist, tender turkey, there must be plenty of meat and a generous amount of fat.

To tell a turkey's age, feel the end of the breast or keel bone and examine the spurs on its feet. Young birds are usually the choice for roasting, but almost any bird can be cooked so that it will be tender.

Uncle Sam, as the chef says to place the turkey in a covered roaster with a little water in the bottom. A carefully-regulated oven will keep it from drying out. The time of cooking varies with the age of the turkey.

The turkey in Indianapolis will be as popular this year, but city market officials say that the demand for ducks and geese is becoming greater. They predict the turkey will become the favorite fowl for the Christmas dinner table.

WASHINGTON NOW HOST TO DUCHESS

By Flora G. Orr

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Washington has had a lady anti-visitationist visiting and lecturing here this week.

Name, the Duchess of Hamilton, is quite somebody in English society, no doubt about that. King George was god-father to one of her sons and Queen Mary, god-mother to one of her daughters.

Mrs. John B. Henderson, Mistress of Sixteenth St., the avenue of embassies, entertained one evening for the duchess and invited a number of Senators and their wives to come for dinner and meet the titled guest.

One of the invited Senators had never heard of the Duchess of Hamilton, so in order to be prepared, he said to his secretary: "Please go to the library and find out everything you can about the Duchess of Hamilton, and those who are with her, write it out on the typewriter for me, and have it ready for me when I get to the office."

The secretary complied with the request, and the Senator was just getting his background in good shape when a newspaper man dropped in.

"Who's this Duchess of Hamilton?" asked the Senator.

"I understand she's an anti-visitationist."

"Anti-visitationist?"

"Yes."

"H'm," said the Senator. "Well, I tried to be a visitationist once. . . . Yes, I'll never forget it. My brother and his chum were sort of amateur medical students. They had a laboratory in a room up over the kitchen. On this particular night they said I could come in and hold the cat while they chloroformed it. . . . I was about 12 years old. . . . We dressed the cat up, but a stocking over its head. Then I tried to hold it. There was a hole in the floor where, in winters, the stovepipe came up from the kitchen and heated the room."

"The minute the boys started trying to give the cat chloroform I jumped out of my hands, went flying through that hole in the floor and landed 'kerplunk' right on the lap of the hired girl's best beau."

The Senator didn't say whether he was going to tell this story to the Duchess of Hamilton.

A report last week declared the White House had as yet received no turkey donations for Thanksgiving dinner. It is stated on good authority that this oversight has now been corrected and that several turkeys and other things, apples, cranberries, pumpkins, nuts and raisins, were sent to the larder at this writing.

John Coolidge is not expected to spend Thanksgiving at the White House, but will remain at Amherst.

Queen Marie of Roumania and her son and daughter will not be here for the holiday as previously planned and announced, and Washington society is regretful that its first view of Her Majesty proved also to be its last.

RESOLUTIONS ON MRS. ROBISON'S DEATH ADOPTED

Seventh District Federated Clubs Pay Tribute to Former Leader.

Resolutions adopted by the Seventh District Federated Clubs on recent death of Mrs. E. J. Robison, former president of the Womans Department club, as submitted by Mrs. Grace Julian Clarke as follows:

"Sentiment is waning. Marriage is becoming more and more of a business transaction," he declares. "It used to be that a woman was all a-flutter for a month before the great day. Now she takes an hour off from business to run in and get married. It's just an incident to her."

We don't believe you, judge. Modern pressure of business or other interest may cause a girl to marry without much formality attending the event, but we don't believe there's a woman with soul so dead that marriage is just an incident to her.

After the consolidation of the two older club organizations into our present Indiana Federation, Mrs. Robison was appointed vice president of the Seventh district, an office corresponding to the present district chairmanship, serving during the season of 1907-1908.

On the organization of the following year she was elected as the first president of the three workers during that early formative period.

Never self-seeking, she did not shrink from any duty, and all who knew her must remember her loving personality, her rare poise, the strength and dignity that were her clothings the wisdom with which she opened her mouth and the law of kindness that was on her tongue. What more need be said? Bearing in mind all

Martha Lee Disagrees With Judge Who Says Sentiment Is Dying Out.

A Chicago judge, who for two years has been sitting in the Cook County marriage court, says sentiment in marriage is dying out.
