

STIRRIN' the DOPE By VEDDER GARD

SOPHOMORES are not supposed to know much. In the fall when they come back to school they are barely out of the freshmen class, which, to say the least, is a period in their collegiate lives in which, if they do know something, they are never given credit for it.

But Pat Page, Indiana football coach, entrusted the handling of the team on the field at Purdue to Paul Harrell, an Indianapolis youth, formerly of Technical High School, who is playing his first year of varsity football at I. U.

Harrell did not make a mistake as far as we could see and we have it from no less a personage than Pat himself that his sophomore quarter delivered the goods. Page said after the game that Harrell ran the team in faultless fashion.

Page also had some kind words for others on the squad. We do not remember them all, but recall Caterton, an end, Randolph, center, and Matthews, guard; some of the younger players who were injected into the play.

Doubtless the coach thought a word of encouragement and praise would not be amiss. He paid a tribute to Purdue's line and Bennett, I. U. back field star, in the same breath when he remarked that Bennett would have done even better behind the Boilermaker forward wall.

Pat said that Wilcox was the best back he had seen this year, and compared him to the famous Oliphant, who, after leaving Purdue and going to West Point, was an all-American player.

IN this column's football selections for last Saturday's games, seventeen winners were picked out of eighteen. Minnesota was chosen to defeat Michigan, in spite of the fact that Michigan was the 10 to 6 favorite. Michigan won, 7 to 6, and therefore our pick was wrong.

But was it so far wrong? The Gophers made nineteen first downs, Michigan's three. They ripped through the Wolverines' line to the end zone. They did it without almost one of their back field stars, who was knocked out.

Michigan attempted ten of their drives forward. Five were intercepted, five were incomplete, and only two were completed. Michigan won one of the luckiest games on record when Oosterhuis scooped up a fumble in the final period and raced fifty-five yards for a touchdown. Friedman kicked the extra point, which made victory possible.

Minnesota gained 318 yards from scrimmage, to Michigan's forty-eight. Some way we can't feel bad about picking the Gophers over the Wolverines. In fact we are proud of it.

It was said some time ago that Coach Spears of Minnesota was to go to the hospital for an operation immediately after the season closed. He probably had his room engaged, which, perhaps, is lucky. Losing a game such as the Gophers dropped to Michigan is enough to send a healthy coach to the infirmary.

BUTLER VS. COE ON COURT

Locals Open Basketball Season at New Armory on Dec. 18.

The first game on this season's Butler basketball schedule will be played at the new Armory of the National guard on N. Pennsylvania St., Dec. 18, with Coe as an opponent.

The schedule announced by Athletic Director Hinkle includes three Big Ten contests, the first of which is at Chicago, Dec. 30. Illinois is played at Urbana Feb. 2, and Iowa is met at Iowa City, Jan. 29. There may be other Western Conference games carded later.

De Pauw comes here Jan. 19, and Wabash appears Feb. 11. The local school this season is member of a basketball conference composed of Notre Dame, Marquette, Michigan State and Butler. Each team plays the other twice in a home and home arrangement. The Notre Dame games, however, have not been arranged.

Chandler, Jackson, Wakefield, Holtz, Summers, and Christopher are letters men back this year as a nucleus. There is promising sophomore material coming on. The schedule: The complete schedule follows: Dec. 18, Coe, here; Dec. 30, Chicago, there; Jan. 7, Evansville, here; Jan. 10, Marquette, here; Jan. 14, Michigan State, here; Jan. 19, De Pauw, there; Jan. 29, Iowa, here; Jan. 31, Michigan State, there; Feb. 1, Western State Normal, there; Feb. 2, Illinois, there; Feb. 4, Franklin, here; Feb. 5, Evansville, there; Feb. 11, Wabash, here; Feb. 17, De Pauw, here; Feb. 19, Marquette, there; Feb. 24, Franklin, there; March 1, Wabash, there.

Plenty of Turkey for Burfords

William Burford won the singles event of the weekly trapshoot at the Indianapolis Gun Club, Saturday, with 96 out of 100 targets. Burford and Jones tied for honors in the doubles with 20 each out of twelve pair. Mrs. Burford was high in the ladies' ranking, breaking 24 out of 25, from seventeen yards.

Winners of the turkey, geese and chickens, put up as prizes, were Burford, Ensminger, Young, Jenkins, Jones, Wiggam, Wendling and Mrs. Burford.

TWO GRID CAPTAINS Central Normal Elects Franklin and Barrett as 1927 Leaders.

DANVILLE, Ind., Nov. 22.—Central Normal College will be well supplied with football captains next season, the players having elected two leaders. Paul Franklin of Plainfield is one captain and John Barrett of Danville the other.

Both men are sophomores. Franklin is a half back and Barrett a guard. At a banquet Saturday night, Coach Cook announced that seventeen of the players would receive the major award, six-inch block "N" sweaters. Twelve received the minor award.

NEALE IS BIG HERO AS J. J. C.S DEFEAT KOKOMO

'Gaumy' Scoops Up Fumbled Punt and Runs for Lone Touchdown in State Title Game.

'Gaumy' Neale of the J. J. C.S. learned among other things in his many years of football that a tackle who followed the ball closely and hard might some time pick up a fumble and turn the tide in a stubbornly fought contest. The former Washington and Jefferson star, who in the height of his fame was considered one of the best tackles in the game, put this knowledge to such good use at Washington Park Sunday that he scored a touchdown against the Kokomo Legion eleven which gave the locals a 6-to-0 victory and the State pro grid title.

With two great lines in terrific combat the scrap looked like a dead-end for three periods. 'Gaumy' had not yet done his real stuff. O-h-he had done plenty, but it was in the fourth quarter that the big lineman got himself into the full glare of the spotlight.

The Kokomo safety man touched a punt from the toe of Loomis and the ball rolled away. Neale was right there. He had been in some such spot all afternoon waiting for something to happen. When the Legion player gave 'Gaumy' his opportunity he made the most of it. Neale is not as slim around the waist as he once was. He hasn't the "wind" of former years, but the big fellow put on full steam ahead and galloped over the Kokomo goal line.

He didn't run as fast as some of the others could have gone, but he tackled as a rear guard and cut down the opposing tacklers who made desperate efforts to reach the thundering heels of the player who was snatching a State title right out from under their noses.

Forest of Football Giants for 'All-American Critics to Stumble Through.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The 1926 football season found the greatest of American college sports better balanced than ever before. The "underdog" always had a chance and not infrequently took it. The largest crowds that ever attended football games saw contests in which the forecasts of the experts were tossed to the winds.

Players of potential 'all-American' caliber were developed, not a handful of large universities, but in more than fifty colleges throughout the country. Yet 1926 was essentially a year of team play, with individual stars submerged.

The complaint of many football coaches last year against "over-emphasis" on individual performance was answered by the game itself rather than by the offending sports writers.

Notre Dame Best This was the greatest change between football of 1925 and the game as it was played this fall. Notre Dame has the best team in the country, yet no one can name Rockne's outstanding star. He has a whole Milky Way.

Selection of "all-American" football teams still have a more bewildering forest of giants to stumble through than ever before. Captain Broda of Brown, Captain Wickhorst of the Navy—the consensus stops just about there and begins to wander far afield.

The new game, with the forward pass only slightly restricted, has proved one requiring a nice balance of speed and power. It is one requiring all-around excellence such as many coaches found it impossible to inculcate into a single team of eleven men.

Yet Russ McLaughery developed a team of eleven "Iron men" at Brown which played through its stiffest games without a single substitution and maintained a record of successive victories unequalled in the East.

"Big Three" Break The break-up of the "Big Three," the addition of Pennsylvania, Purdue and Indiana to Harvard's 1927 schedule, the new game played at Princeton and Ohio State, and the success of the East in intercollegiate games with the West all point to football becoming even more of a national family affair next fall.

The Army-Navy game at Chicago next Saturday will stimulate this feeling, whatever the outcome and no matter how many spectators go to jail.

Meanwhile, there is a rift in the ranks of Yale graduates over loyalty to Tad Jones, College sentiment, and the Yale Record and those immediately in touch with the situation, staunchly support the Eli coach. But this element pretends to be unable to hear any criticism of Jones—and needs only a trip to New York to be disillusioned.

Yale found little satisfaction in a hollow victory over Harvard. There was no celebration to speak of in New Haven after the game. The most noise on the campus was made by a Salvation Army band, and through the corridors of the Hotel Taft there were more calls for white rock than for three times three for Yale.

Two Lose First Games New York University's defeat in Nebraska snowstorm and the surprise victory of Boston University over Holy Cross removed two more teams from the "undefeated" list for 1926. Brown still has Colgate to contend with, the Navy must beat

Far-West Star

George Gullermsen

Washington has been minus the services of the sensational George Wilson on the football field this fall, but in another George-Gullermsen—it has a fellow only a step or so behind the great 1925 star. Gullermsen is captain and "quarter back" of this season's team, is a heady field general and a regular padlock in gridiron togs. Henry Farrell placed him on his all-American selections.

The Army and Alabama must withstand the assault of Georgia if these eleven are to keep their slates clean. Boston College, with only Holy Cross to beat next Saturday, is far from certain of remaining in the favored list.

No ice-wagon backed up to football's doorstep with a "Red" Grange this season, and the backers of professional football, who incidentally are very blue about the dwindling gate receipts in the East, will have to do considerable ballyhooing to keep alive the reputations of the stars of 1926, who, according to agreement, may not turn "pro" until next autumn.

BROAD RIPPLE NIGHT The Uptown Theater, College at Forty-Second St., will observe Broad Ripple High School night, tonight, in conjunction with the showing of "One Minute to Play," the motion picture starring Red Grange. The program in which Broad Ripple High School will take part has the active sponsorship of K. V. Ammermann, principal, who will open the special high school program with a short talk.

CALLED GREATEST IN WEST

Notre Dame, Only Under-ated Eleven in Corn Belt, Rated Highly.

By Clark B. Kelsey United Press Staff Correspondent CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Notre Dame University of South Bend, Ind., stands out today as the best team in the corn belt, where some of the greatest teams in the country are developed.

Next to Notre Dame stands Michigan, 1925 champion of the Western Conference, which again holds the honor in 1926, but is forced this season to share the championship honor with Northwestern University, a team which has never before topped the Big Ten in its thirty years of competition.

Northwestern's claim on the title is a popular one in most Big Ten camps, because of the sportsmanship displayed by the Wildcats last year in declining any right to the title after defeating Michigan, leader in the Big Ten percentage column.

Minnesota, one of the strongest teams in the middle west, played a brilliant season; the Gophers broke even in the conference scoring column, losing two games to Michigan and beating Iowa and Wisconsin.

Spears III The first loss of the season to Notre Dame and the first Michigan defeat may be credited to the illness of Coach "Doc" Spears. As Spears returned to his team and as the season wore on, the Gophers increased in power and resourcefulness, and although Michigan again defeated the Gophers Saturday, the Wolverines did not outplay the Northerners.

There were several other features of the 1926 season. Ohio State, which figured as a lowly team in the Big Ten after the successful teams of past, came back and played a very successful season.

Illinois showed that the loss of "Red" Grange had not disheartened it. Purdue, like Northwestern, a Big Ten underdog, had a successful year. Wisconsin, which started out on the wrong track came back and won its share of games.

Chicago Weak Chicago, considered the "horse-shoe" team of the Big Ten for many years, finally lost to every conference contender. Coach A. A. Stutz, veteran coach, had the poorest material with which he had ever worked. Indiana lost every game, but gained a capable coach, Pat Page.

Iowa also played a losing card, but showed the conference such outstanding stars as Kutsch at half back and Nelson at ankle. Notre Dame is the only major team in the entire territory to weather the season without a defeat. Coach Knute Rockne's team is not a member of the Big Ten, but defeated three members of the so-called Circle. The closest game the Irish ran into this season was the Northwestern fracas, and that contest came near being a scoreless tie.

Notre Dame's defeat of the Army, after Michigan lost to the Navy puts the test of a national championship directly on the result of the Army-Navy game here next Saturday. If the Navy wins it may have a slice of the National title. If the Army wins, Notre Dame of 1926 looks to rank up with the Notre Dame "Four Horsemen" team of 1924. It wins over Carnegie Tech and Southern California in its remaining games.

READMITTANCE IS URGED

Germany Expected to Compete for Davis Tennis Cup.

By Times Special NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Germany's admission to Davis cup competition and membership in the International Lawn Tennis Federation is forecast by the attitude and action of United States tennis officials.

Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the International Play Committee of the S. S. L. T. A. has sent a letter to Secretary R. Callay of the I. L. T. F., recommending Germany's readmittance.

There are some good tennis players in Germany who would be strong contenders in Davis cup competition. When "Vinnie" Richards and Howard Kinsey paid, a flying visit to Berlin last summer, the American Stars met unexpected defeat. Dr. Heinz Landman, F. W. Rahe, Baron Bela De Kehring, Otto Froitzheim and Oscar Kreuzer are some of the leading German stars.

SOUTH BEND WEAKENS

By United Press SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 22.—Emerson High School of Gary, just as their name "Golden Tornado" would imply, made a sweeping finish of a game with the South Bend Bears, here Saturday and walked off the field victorious, 20 to 0.

The Bears played the Steel City boys to a standstill in the first half that ended 0 to 0. The third quarter, however, saw the locals weakening. In the fourth period one touchdown was smashed over and two more were the result of forward passes.

COAST PLAYERS STAR

By United Press LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22.—The Los Angeles professional football team won a 20 to 9 victory over the combined Lions and Horsemen teams at Elberts field. "Breck" Miller and "Tut" Inlay, former University of California players, starred for the winners.

I. U. CARD

Net Squad to Have Strong Reserve This Year.

By United Press BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 22.—Net prospects are bright at Indiana University. After three weeks hard practice under Coach Everett Dean, a squad of sophomores threatens to oust several regulars from their positions on the varsity five.

Basketball players who have been on the gridiron squad will find it difficult to retain their posts. The Crimson will have a reserve strength which it lacked the past three years.

The schedule: Dec. 10, De Pauw, at Bloomington; Dec. 17, Kalamazoo, at Lexington; Jan. 4, Carleton, at Bloomington; Jan. 10, Wisconsin, at Madison; Jan. 17, Northwestern, at Evanston; Jan. 24, Michigan, at Bloomington; Feb. 5, at Bloomington; Feb. 12, Wabash, at Arbor; Feb. 19, at Chicago; Feb. 26, at March 5, Northwestern, at Bloomington; and March 9, Ohio, at Columbus.
