

PUBLIC RULE OF UTILITIES WINS RENEWED FAVOR

Experiment In New York Is Proving Success Past Expectations.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Newly roused interest in public ownership of public utilities is being demonstrated from east to west coasts as result of an experiment in financing now nearing a successful close in New York City.

New York has found a way to build public utilities without increasing her bonded indebtedness.

A few years ago the Port of New York Authority was created and given power by the legislatures of New York and New Jersey to issue bonds for port improvements secured by mortgages on the properties it was to acquire and by the revenues to be derived therefrom.

Building Three Bridges

The Port Authority is building three bridges connecting New York and New Jersey. It successfully has floated bonds for all these projects. Bonds for the first two bridges sold at 4 1/2 per cent coupon rate. For the third bridge 4 per cent bonds were issued, but were sold at a slight discount.

The bonds are not a lien against taxpayers' property. Neither State legally is liable for their redemption. Each State has, however, lent its moral support to the project, and public confidence in the bonds is strong.

They have been made legal investment for savings banks and trustees, public officers and insurance companies.

Under this system, the utilities literally pay for their own construction, and when this is accomplished they either become free to all the people or a source of public revenue.

Will Yield Revenue

Before any of her projects were undertaken, the Port Authority had expert surveys made to ascertain that the bridges under contemplation would yield an adequate revenue.

The bonds were issued on this basis, and the bridge tolls pledged for their repayment.

Two of the New York bridges are nearly completed and will start paying for themselves next year.

The plan has succeeded so well in this instance that Albany has created a municipal port authority to improve the port there. Governor Al Smith has recommended to the New York legislature that State development of power resources be undertaken in the same way.

Wisconsin, Indiana, Kentucky and Washington have followed New York's lead and adopted State laws permitting creation of local authorities. San Francisco city officials have been studying the New York plan recently, as a possible means of financing the proposed San Francisco bay bridge.

FLIERS TO BE FETED

San Francisco and Oakland to Honor Pacific Heros.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 12.—A rousing greeting awaited the arrival today of the first aviators to span the Pacific.

Lieut. Lester J. Matland and Albert F. Hegenberger, left here just two weeks ago in their triple-motored Fokker and landed at Hawaii twenty-five hours and a few minutes later.

The liner Maul on which the aviators are making passage will be met out at sea from the Golden Gate by a squadron of army planes.

In addition to the reception and parade here, Oakland, across the bay, where the official start was made, will try to outdo San Francisco in honoring the conquerors of a Pacific airway.

SPEEDWAY HERO LEAVES

Norman K. Batten, hero of the 1927 Speedway race, hopped off Monday in a Douglas transport airplane, from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, for Dayton, Ohio.

There, at the home of his brother, Eugene Batten, he will convalesce from burns received at the race track when he started his burning car to safety. He has been in the Methodist Hospital since Memorial day.

Glenn Lampton of McCook field piloted the "air ambulance" which conveyed Batten.

SPEED CRUISER BURNED

Four Forced Into Water to Save Their Lives.

BAYPORT, L. I., July 12.—An explosion in the cabin of a speed cruiser owned by Dr. Chalmers Sangree of 300 Riverside Drive, New York, set fire to the boat in Great South Bay and forced Dr. and Mrs. Sangree, their daughter, Daphne, 18, and John Van Pelt, 19, of Patchogue to leap into the water to save their lives. The cruiser was burned severely, but were rescued.

39,980 TO PHONE GIRL

Husband Who Deserted Woman and Daughter Must Pay.

NEW YORK, July 12.—A sheriff's jury has decided that Frederick Bunnell of Los Angeles, must pay $39,980 to his wife, Elizabeth, whom he deserted in 1912.

The jury decided that since 1912, Mrs. Bunnell has expended $28,000 on herself and daughter, who now is 18. Mrs. Bunnell has been working as a telephone operator.

Quits Career for Chase of Beauty; Would You?

Vee Vee as a beach beauty.

She once was a prim little business girl, but now she's a bathing beauty, the toast of the beach.

Vee Vee Cameron dressed in crisp, business-like clothes, wore her hair long, and dimmed her sea-green eyes behind austere spectacles. Then something happened.

Almost overnight, she was transformed into a glittering butterfly, spending the last cent of her bank nestegg in her chase of beauty and a husband. She gave a careless flip of her hand in farewell to her business career and became a huntress of man, intentions matrimonial.

Vee Vee is the heroine of Anne Austin's "The Penny Princess," which will start in serial form soon in The Times. Do you think she was right in giving up her business ambitions to win the man of her choice? Whatever you do think, write it in not more than 175 words and send it to the "Penny Princess Editor of The Times."

The best letter on the subject will win for the writer a trip to Grand Beach, Mich., and a week's stay at the Gilmor hotel, one of the finest on the Great Lakes, with room and meals at The Times' expense.

Four other prizes are offered for letters—$10, $5, $3 and $2. Get your letters in today. And don't forget the "Penny Princess" free ball at Cinderella, "the dance hall beautiful," at Riverside, the night of July 21.

Like Bull With Horns; Says Bar-Pierced Man

HAMMOND, Ind., July 12.—Paul Kosty, 37-year-old Hungarian workman, "felt like a bull with horns sticking out" when a 24-foot steel rod pierced his head in a foundry accident, he told the United Press.

"I was working at my bench, straightening bars," he said. "The machines were shut off. Just as I was about to raise up, I heard the machines whir again, but I couldn't stop. I didn't feel the bar strike me, although I was fully conscious. The first thing I knew I was pulling at the hot bar with my hands, and yelled for the fellows to help me pull it out."

"I felt like a bull with horns sticking out of my head," he said laughingly. He was the only one who laughed. His nurse, and his physician, Dr. Joseph Pugh, were marvelling at the stamina of the man who could live with a hole in his head from the left jaw to the right forehead.

"I tried to pull it out. You see, it dogged near went through my whole head. I hollered and yelled. Some of the boys came running, and helped me yank it out."

Kosty appeared to be suffering no pain. He has been told, he said, that when the wound has healed a bit more, that surgeons will put steel plates in the skull to close the wound.

His right eye—on the side where the bar came out—appeared to flicker a bit, and was said to be partly paralyzed.

His main difficulty now, officials at St. Margaret's hospital said, is in eating.

"We brought him in here to die; we don't see yet how he escaped it," one hospital official said.

HOUSES STAND ON BOUNDARY

Queer Problems Are Faced by Immigration Guards.

MONTREAL, July 12.—When a Canadian housewife takes a pork chop out of the ice box in Rock Island, Que., and carries it across the kitchen floor to put it into the frying pan in Derby Line, Vt., she furnishes the United States Immigration Department officials with a first-class problem, now that Washington has issued strict regulations covering aliens who cross the border in their daily work.

This and other phases of the immigration problem, such as trying to dam the ever-flowing stream of individuals who try to beat the United States quotas via the smuggling route, will be explained to a sub-committee on Appropriations who will tour the Canadian boundary.

The sub-committee consists of Representatives Milton Schreive of Pennsylvania, chairman, and Representatives William B. Oliver of Alabama, and Anthony J. Griffin of New York, and they will be accompanied by R. Carl White, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Melvin Jones, Assistant Director of the Budget.

The sub-committee will go to Derby Line and Rock Island.

Houses partly in Canada and partly in the United States will be inspected. They will see a factory where employees work in Canada, when on the North side of the building and in the United States when they cross to the South side.

So Big!

JASPER, Minn., July 12.—Another story of the greatness of things in South Dakota has been added by W. H. Peck, farmer near here, to anecdotes of the State's prowess.

Peck asserts that the recent heat wave caused corn to grow eight inches on his farm within forty-eight hours.

The knee-high plants shot up three inches the first day, Peck said, and on the second day of the hot spell grew five inches more.

TOURISTS PAY BIG VISA BILL

Rubber Stamps Will Cost Americans $3,000,000.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The 200,000 Americans expected to visit Europe this year face a bill of at least $3,000,000 for European rubber-stamps, in the shape of the $10 visa fee still assessed by several European Governments on American passports.

The tourists will already have contributed $10 each to the U. S. Government for their passports, so their total rubber-stamp bill probably will not be far from $5,000,000.

The United States Government has been trying for three years to get a reduction in the $10 visa fees of foreign governments, but France, England, Italy and Norway still charge $10. Spain charges $2.50. The other principal countries visa American passports free.

Congress empowered the State Department to seek reciprocal reductions of visa fees from European nations, but little success has been achieved. No intimation of a reduction in the State Department passport fees for American tourists has been made, however. It is said the fees provide enough money to run the department.
