

ings which she filed after his convictions.

He also filed a petition charging her with overly friendly relations with Franklin Dodge, former U. S. agent.

The shooting today took place after Remus had pursued his wife and daughter, Ruth, 19, from the Alms Hotel here to Eden Park.

Mrs. Remus and her daughter were en route to the office of her attorney this morning, preliminary to the opening of the divorce suit, when they were pursued by Remus.

Acted Like Madman

"He acted like a madman," Ruth Remus said, in telling of the shooting.

"Mother and I left by the front way from the Alms Hotel and entered a taxicab. As the driver was taking us toward Eden Park I observed a big automobile with two men in it following us. As our car passed under the park bridge I noticed one of the men in the car trailing us was Mr. Remus."

"Then I saw that the driver of the Remus car was trying to head us off. As our driver slowed up near the greenhouse Remus started to alight, but we kept on going until we reached the curve. There the driver of the other car cut us off and forced us to stop."

Remus Jumps From Car

"With his right hand in his pocket, Mr. Remus jumped out of his auto and ran toward our cab. I started to get out, but mother pulled me back. Then she jumped out and ran up the road."

"But he ran after her, calling her vile names, one after another."

"He seized her by the arm, pulled her toward him and then shot her."

"I grabbed Mr. Remus and held him. I said: 'What is the matter with you, are you going insane?'"

"Mr. Remus then got into his automobile and was driven away."

Did It as "Principle"

Shortly after Remus surrendered himself at police headquarters, he was collected in thought, but gave signs of repressed excitement when questioned by police.

'DUMPED' IN PRISON: OF ALL THE 'DUMPS'!

"Minnesota St. Dumps" Alcohol

"Dump" Puts Pair in "the Dumps."

Joseph Powell, 34, of 2218 Daisy St., and Lee Werner, 34, 1521 Crut St., were found in the unlovely territory known as the "Minnesota St. dumps" Wednesday afternoon by police, and now they are in "the dumps" worse than ever.

Sergeant Eisenhut and Patrolmen Crouch and Purcell, dry squad members and accustomed to having the evidence "dumped," said they found the pair with a five-gallon can of alcohol in "the dumps."

Powell is alleged to have kept liquor customers waiting at his home while he journeyed to "the bad lands" to fill their orders. Warner had a half pint of the alleged alcohol in his possession, purchased from Powell, police said.

They were arrested on charges of operating a blind tiger and vagrancy.

REMUS STRIFE CARRIED HERE IN BOOZE CASE

Wife Fought Liquor Charge in U. S. Court; Husband on Other Side.

On Dec. 17, 1925, Mrs. Imogene Remus, wife of George Remus, millionaire bootlegger, flashily dressed and with a touch of superb hauteur, stood in a corridor at the Federal Bldg. and said: "Mr. Remus is bitterly angry at me; he now is seeking revenge."

And today came dispatches from Cincinnati, Ohio, which told of Remus shooting his wife and wounding her seriously before going into court for the hearing on the divorce suit brought by her. Her prediction has come true.

She admitted when here for her own trial and that of thirty-two others for the alleged "milking" of the Jack Daniel distillery at St. Louis, Mo., of 890 barrels of whisky that she "was afraid of Remus."

She could not understand why she had been indicted while her husband had been untouched. He was the Government's chief witness in the conspiracy trial.

"I can not believe that the United States Government will punish a woman for her husband's wrongdoings," she declared. "George Remus is the arch conspirator in the case. To him belongs the plan, the plot, everything."

"They say I drove liquor at night. I did drive all night with my child from St. Louis to Cincinnati, to get away from him."

Jealousy Is Shown

Mr. and Mrs. Remus had no conversations in public whatsoever, while they were here for the trial. As the State's chief witness, Remus was placed on the aggressive side of the court battle, while she, like the remaining defendants, was fighting against the charges. She was freed.

While investigation of the case and the trial was in process, there were rumors that Remus and his wife were having severe verbal battles over the fact that a former Federal official always was with her.

Only once did this break forth. Remus followed the man from a downtown hotel and attacked him with a gold-headed cane. Remus was arrested by local police.

Mrs. Remus declared she had left her husband, but while he was serving a twenty-one-month sentence in Atlanta prison she had "stuck with him."

Waited Till Term Ended

"I didn't file suit for divorce until he was ready to leave the prison," she related.

Remus did not have much to say about "Mrs. Remus," as he called her. He did remark, though, that if he hadn't trusted her and placed his finances in her care while he was in prison he would have been considerably more wealthy.

He told long stories of how interesting the bootleg game was and how he did it for "the money and the thrill."

He once was a lawyer, but went into the bootleg game for the excitement. Federal agents said he once had $22,000,000, that he made in the liquor business.

After the trial was completed here, Remus went to Chicago and attempted to start in the real estate business. After a short time, Federal officials began considering deportation of Remus.

More than a year ago he began serving a year's term in the Ohio State Prison at Troy, Ohio, for operation of Ohio's largest bootlegging establishment—Death Valley farm, near Cincinnati.

Dispute Over Use of Terminal Under Adversity in U. S. Court.

Controversy over payment of rent for the railroad terminal station here by the Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Western Railroad Company was taken under advisement in Federal Court at Cincinnati Wednesday at the conclusion of arguments.

Attorneys for the C. I. & W. and Indianapolis Belt Railroad contend that because of the merger of the two companies of the original thirteen which leased the station, its rental should be one-twelfth of the total instead of two-thirtieths.

Spanish Boy, Unwanted by Parent, Seeks Friend at Indiana Harbor.

A grin is the same in any language and by that token, Arthur Borja, 17, who speaks Spanish fluently, but knows no English, expressed his appreciation for the kindness extended him by Claude C. McCoy, board of safety secretary.

For it was McCoy who took the stranded youth to Frank L. Martino, interpreter, at 312 Pythian Bldg., and learned that he was trying to make his way to a friend in Indiana Harbor, when he ran out of money here.

May Luber, Real Silk Mills employee, told McCoy of Borja's plight. Through the interpreter, he told that he is an American, born at New Orleans of a Mexican mother and Spanish father. Leaving his father, the boy went into Mexico with his mother when he was only 3 years old and so did not learn the English language.

When he hunted up his father a short time ago, the parent "didn't remember him," so he made up his mind to join the Indiana Harbor friend. McCoy and his friend contributed a purse sufficient to buy the youth's railroad ticket and to get him started on the last lap of his journey north.
