

brought against Shumaker and Watson also agreed with me. "I never have, at any time, tried to influence this honorable court, directly or indirectly. I never have tried to influence the attorney general. I never have asked friends to talk to the honorable court or to the attorney general.

"I never wrote a letter to anybody in Indiana or any place in the world. I never mentioned this case in a public speech."

Judge Travis leaned over the bench and said:

"Senator Robinson is not on trial."

Under cross questioning by Defense Attorney James Bingham Sr., Walb said Shumaker had not asked him to see any of the judges.

Calls Interest Powerful

"I understood if I could convert Mr. Gilliom it would help Shumaker's case and better the political situation," he reiterated.

Walb said, with emphasis, that he "knew Dr. Shumaker's efforts against a ticket have their effect."

"You know what this Anti-Saloon League is, don't you?" asked Bingham.

"Why, yes," Walb replied slowly, "it's some folks, with Dr. Shumaker at the head of it."

Informed by Bingham as to the objects of the organization, Walb drew: "Yes, it's some sort of arrangement."

Minis Takes Stand

The Rev. G. F. Hubbard, pastor of the M. E. Church at Auburn for the last two and a half years, and for five years pastor of Walb's church, at La Grange, followed the Republican chairman to the stand.

He said that Shumaker addressed his congregation in September, 1927, but made no reference in the service to his case.

Also, he denied Shumaker had asked him to write a letter to Walb asking him to use his influence and that of the Republican party in Shumaker's behalf. The letter was offered as a State exhibit, but on objection by the defense it was not admitted.

Depositions Admitted

Depositions of Henry Lane Wilson, former United States Ambassador to Mexico, and Senator James E. Watson were admitted as evidence, on motion of Attorney General Gilliom.

Attorney Bingham, defense counsel, objected on the ground that if the Shumaker case was a criminal trial, Wilson and Watson should have been in court. The court overruled the objection, with Justice Martin dissenting.

Attorneys for Shumaker contend that Shumaker twice had been jeopardized for the same offense and that the contempt penalty assessed by the court violated the United States Constitution.

In event the court sustains the contention of James Bingham, Sr., Shumaker's attorney, that Shumaker was a member of the press when he made his report to the league, the case will be carried direct to the United States Supreme Court.

This is possible because only the Supreme Court can determine whether the United States Constitution has been violated in such instance, it was stated.

Jud's MEN'S DUDS

19 E. OHIO ST. 15 N. PENNSY

SPECIAL WINDOW SHADES

36-Inch Oil OPAQUE SHADES..... 65c

W. R. BEARD & CO.

453 E. Washington St.

3-Pc. Bed Outfit $16.50

Woodstone Bed, comfortable Spring and Cotton, 12 x 14 ft. 3-pc. outfit.

WEST-SIDE FURNITURE COMPANY

438 WEST WASHINGTON ST.

CLOTHING ON CREDIT

ASKIN & MARINE CO.

171 W. WASHINGTON ST.

Indianapolis Automobile Club

Marion Co., Inc.

24-Hour Service Free to Members

Dues $7.50 Per Year DREXEL 3770

LEON

Tailored to Measure Men's Suits and O'Coats

Salesroom and Shop 554 MASSACHUSETTS AVE.

GUARANTEE TIRE & RUBBER CO.

Everything for the Car for Less

You Can Save MONEY

By Buying Your Next COAT OR DRESS at BRENNER'S

26 EAST WASHINGTON ST.

THERE are many advantages in having a checking account. Individuals that have a system to keep track of their income and outgo, keep a checking account which enables them, too, to watch the expenditures.

Aetna Trust & Savings Co.

23 N. Pennsylvania

THE CIVILIZATION by DR. WILL DURANT

TODAY 6,500 English officials (escorted by an army of 228,000 soldiers) rule 294,000,000 Hindus.

The British have introduced better methods of economic production and political organization; they have put an end to infanticide and the suttee (which required a woman to be buried, sometimes alive, with her dead husband); they have improved transportation and begun to guard against famine; in many ways they have given the Hindus a better government than they might have provided for themselves.

And doubtless India, like the Argentine Republic and the United States, has cotton and wheat which England sorely needs. But how brave Englishmen, brought up on the finest traditions of freedom, can look upon India without shame and horror is one of the seven wonders of the modern world.

THE picture today is of glory departed.

The fertile fields are busy with fertile natives, laboring to raise rice, tea, cotton and wheat to feed and clothe nations of which they have never heard. The birth rate is high, but the death rate well nigh equals it. Filth is everywhere and famine comes with reliable regularity to keep the population down.

In 1770 and again in 1900 the failure of the monsoon rains starved half a hundred million. In the modern cities, Bombay, Calcutta, Cawnpore, Madras, etc., there are factories in early English style, where weavers and other toilers work old-fashioned hours for old-fashioned pay.

The old handicrafts are disappearing as the inevitable factory advances. The artisans in silk and rugs and ivory and wood are dying out, and their skill is passing with them.

At Benares hand-made silks, woven on domestic looms, are still made in small quantity and high quality, and sold for great prices, though the weavers and embroiderers are paid but a few pennies a day.

At Delhi the finest weavers in India are gathered in the factory of a native capitalist who justly prides himself on paying the comparatively generous wage of 18 cents a day.

From the Province of Cashmere came formerly the loveliest shawls in the world; but that glory, too, is gone.

MODERN INDIA

THE weavers and embroiderers are men, for the women are too low in status to enjoy access even to the industrial arts. Until 1927 the girls were married off by their parents at an early age, sometimes years before they were sent to their husbands. If, meanwhile, their unsexed spouses died, they had to accept a widowed chastity to the end.

For though the English abolished the suttee in 1829, the Hindus make an outcast of the woman who consents to live while her husband is in the grave. No one would think of marrying her.

It is one of a thousand superstitions (or intuitions) of the Hindu that a wife is always responsible for her husband's death.

While he lives she is his faithful slave, for adultery is not as popular in India as it is in prosperous countries.

There are courtesans in India as everywhere, but, strange to say, it is in the temples that the Nautch girls do their most voluptuous dancing and offer themselves promiscuously to men.

Education is primitive; and though one sees students living lives of service and poverty for the privilege of learning the Brahman's lore, ninety per cent of the men and ninety-five per cent of the women are illiterate.

Perhaps reading is a superfluous accomplishment which in our days of million-voiced propaganda has become an impediment to the acquisition of truth, but its rarity in India leaves a very smart clientele for Hindus who would write great literature.

Since Kalidasa composed his plays far back in the third century, and Amir Khusrau, the Moslem poet, sang in the thirteenth, India has given no name to the world but that of Rabindranath Tagore; and it is not Hindus who read Tagore.

BUT then, in the midst of universal superstition and poverty, one comes at Agra, at Delhi, at Ahmedabad, upon some of the finest architecture in the world. India, like Egypt and unlike China, has been weak in painting, barbarous in sculpture and magnificent in architecture. The Mogul emperors, as an adage has it, designed like giants and finished like jewelers.

India architecture, true to the rule, began with funeral mounds—topes or stupas built to preserve the relics of holy men.

Later the Hindus carved temples out of the solid natural rock, as at Karli (75 B. C.) and Ellore (760 A. D.), and chiseled the surface in such detail that one would almost class these works as statuary.

Too often the carving is excessive and bizarre; one temple appropriately gets its name from the superabundant monkeys with which it is adorned.

Better taste came with Mohammedans, who brought with them that patience for delicate detail which Europeans may sample at the Alhambra.

The Saracenic style in India has left us splendid mosques and tombs; at Agra, for example, the tomb of Etmah Dowah—with a facade which is a marvel of embroidery in stone; and the "Pearl Mosque," so-called because built of white marble unstained except by Koran inscriptions inlaid with precious gems.

Of the Mogul architects how shall one speak who has not seen their work? We are told of the beauty of Ahmed's tomb at Ahmedabad, and of Sheikh-Selim's at Fatehpur; of the palaces of the Moguls at Delhi, whose mosaics are rated as the finest ever made; of the Diwan-i-Am, or Hall of Public Audience, with its graceful colonnades; above all of the Taj Mahal (that is "Crown of all Palaces"), which is called by many architects the most beautiful building in the world.

This last and greatest glory of the Moguls was built at Agra in 1629 by order of Shah Jehan to commemorate a wife who died in presenting him with her fourteenth child.

Jehan brought together, for the tasks of direction and design, a Persian, Ustad Isa; an Italian, Geramino Veronesi, and a Frenchman, Austin de Bordeaux.

Judging from other works by the same hand in India, it is particularly the last name that should be enshrined in the memory of those who honor artists more than kings.

Perhaps the west will outlive its imperialistic fever, or burn itself out in fratricidal war, or be left behind as other lands alchemize their soils' metals into gold; and India, which had sages and saints when Europe was a waste, may be left again to seek truth and goodness without losing manhood and freedom.

Bullies die young, soon weeded out by their own violence; and it may be so with States.

Not today, despite that other Buddha, Mahatma Gandhi, can India shake the lion off; but the time will come when she will be strong again, and the mighty will be put down from their seats.

It would be in the characteristic humor of history if the patient Hindu should be writing wisdom and building beauty when the nations that now grind their heels upon his face are left ruined and desolate with strife.

(Copyright, 1927, by Will Durant) To Be Continued.

times or stupas built to preserve the relics of holy men.

Later the Hindus carved temples out of the solid natural rock, as at Karli (75 B. C.) and Ellore (760 A. D.), and chiseled the surface in such detail that one would almost class these works as statuary.

Too often the carving is excessive and bizarre; one temple appropriately gets its name from the superabundant monkeys with which it is adorned.

Better taste came with Mohammedans, who brought with them that patience for delicate detail which Europeans may sample at the Alhambra.

The Saracenic style in India has left us splendid mosques and tombs; at Agra, for example, the tomb of Etmah Dowah—with a facade which is a marvel of embroidery in stone; and the "Pearl Mosque," so-called because built of white marble unstained except by Koran inscriptions inlaid with precious gems.

Of the Mogul architects how shall one speak who has not seen their work? We are told of the beauty of Ahmed's tomb at Ahmedabad, and of Sheikh-Selim's at Fatehpur; of the palaces of the Moguls at Delhi, whose mosaics are rated as the finest ever made; of the Diwan-i-Am, or Hall of Public Audience, with its graceful colonnades; above all of the Taj Mahal (that is "Crown of all Palaces"), which is called by many architects the most beautiful building in the world.

This last and greatest glory of the Moguls was built at Agra in 1629 by order of Shah Jehan to commemorate a wife who died in presenting him with her fourteenth child.

Jehan brought together, for the tasks of direction and design, a Persian, Ustad Isa; an Italian, Geramino Veronesi, and a Frenchman, Austin de Bordeaux.

Judging from other works by the same hand in India, it is particularly the last name that should be enshrined in the memory of those who honor artists more than kings.

Perhaps the west will outlive its imperialistic fever, or burn itself out in fratricidal war, or be left behind as other lands alchemize their soils' metals into gold; and India, which had sages and saints when Europe was a waste, may be left again to seek truth and goodness without losing manhood and freedom.

Bullies die young, soon weeded out by their own violence; and it may be so with States.

Not today, despite that other Buddha, Mahatma Gandhi, can India shake the lion off; but the time will come when she will be strong again, and the mighty will be put down from their seats.

It would be in the characteristic humor of history if the patient Hindu should be writing wisdom and building beauty when the nations that now grind their heels upon his face are left ruined and desolate with strife.

(Copyright, 1927, by Will Durant) To Be Continued.

GARAGE OWNER IS HELD

Frank B. Baughman, 916 Bellefontaine St., garage owner at 2335 W. Michigan St., faced charges of receiving stolen goods and failing to have a second-hand dealer's license in municipal court today.

He was arrested after he was alleged to have bought twelve inner tubes from Morris Kelly, 22, of Whiteland, and Ralph Smith, 19, of Bargersville, held on charges of burglary and grand larceny.

OUTFITTERS TO THE WHOLE FAMILY

Chas. Store Buying Enables Us to Sell for Less!

GLOBE STORES

Main store—326 W. Wash. St. Store No. 2—450 W. Wash. St.

Finest and Largest Stock of Pocketknives

In the State. Also a complete stock of other fine cutlery.

VONNEGUT'S 120-124 E. Wash. St.

OPEN a CHARGE ACCOUNT

MEN'S & WOMEN'S Brownings

118 East Washington CLOTHING

Joseph Gardner Co.

Roofers and Sheet Metal Workers

MA in 2078

147 KENTUCKY AVENUE

Do You Have a Goal?

No matter what your goal in life is, you can reach it quicker if you save regularly.

Start a Savings Account Now, at the CITY TRUST CO.

108 E. Washington St.

WASTE PAPER We Buy All Kinds

American Paper Stock Company

Incorporated.

SANTA ALWAYS CONFUSED BY CITY'S CIRCLE

Times Writer Visits Noted Friend of Children in His Home.

Here is another story from Holly Berry, the Indianapolis Times' special correspondent who accompanied the Klein Schmidt expedition into the Far North to try to locate Santa Claus and take pictures of him. Berry's reports telling how they succeeded have been published in the Times. In this and succeeding articles Berry will tell of the long search.

By HOLLY BERRY

Special Correspondent of The Times in North Poleville, Eskimoland, Nov. 21.—(By radio).—Santa Claus stood smiling right amid thousands of toys in his great snow castle here after learning where I came from told me the names of many Indianapolis children whom he knew personally.

It made me feel right at home, in spite of the long trip over endless ice floes our party had been forced to make to reach this jovial old man's home.

The memory of months of weary fighting through blinding snow storms, up icy cliffs and down into frozen valleys, of which I have told you in previous stories, melted like the ice from our beards as we sat before the fire in the cozy room and heard Santa tell of his Indianapolis experiences.

Circle Puzzles Santa

"You know, that Monument Circle in Indianapolis always gets me confused," Santa said, with a chuckle, as he recalled having been delayed time after time trying to guide his reindeers off the Circle at the proper street.

"One Christmas Eve I left a doll in a boy's stocking out on N. Meridian St. and an air rifle in a little girl's Christmas tree out on E. Market St. and got everything else all backwards because I got turned around driving above the Monument," Santa recalled with a smile.

"I got all the way to Kokomo before I noticed my mistake and had to come back and change them all. I wouldn't have noticed it when I got to Kokomo, I don't suppose, except that I should have been in Terre Haute."

Makes You Feel at Home

Then Santa threw himself back in his big leather chair and laughed until big tears rolled down his fat cheeks, which were as red and wrinkled as a strawberry.

A few minutes before we had been awed by the splendor of this fairy-like castle. It hardly seemed possible that we could be made to feel so completely at home in so short a time. But we did.

Here we were laughing and joking with the most famous man in the world, and the most loved! A few minutes before we knew him only by reputation, but now we had seen the hand that has given boys and girls wonderful presents every year as long as any one can remember, and were actually calling him by his first name!

If any of my readers could have been with us—and I wish you all could have been—you would have understood why we all felt at home in the presence of this wonderful old man, who radiates the spirit of love, of goodness—of Christmas!

Knows 25,000,000 Children

After getting his promise to pose for additional pictures, Santa offered to take us into his mammoth library.

"Would you like to see the books in which I keep the names of 25,000,000 children with the record of each one brought down to date each night?" he asked.

Would we? I should say!

So, Tuesday I hope to be able to tell you some mighty interesting things about Santa's library. We understand he guards these books very carefully, but he seems to be such a kindly old fellow that maybe he will let me look up the records of some Indianapolis boys and girls. We'll see Tuesday!

WRECKS SHERIFF'S CAR

By United Press

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 21.—Sheriff Frank Daniels of Madison County is in the market today for a new official auto, following wrecking of his old car in a collision Saturday night with one occupied by Walter Ellis and Jack Beady, both of Muncie. Ellis, driving the other car, was fined $71 for driving while drunk.

All those in the two autos were bruised, including John Howell, who was being brought here from Sidney, Ohio, to face a delinquency charge.

Rheumatism Recipe

While serving with the American Army in France I was given a prescription for Rheumatism and Neuritis that has produced most gratifying results in thousands of cases. The prescription cost me nothing, so I ask nothing for it, but will send it free to any one who writes me. Ex-Sergeant Paul Case, Room 256 Quigg Bldg., Brockton, Mass.—Advertisement.

000 children with the record of each

Santa Picks Best Reindeer for Team

This telephoto picture shows Santa Claus with his enormous herd of reindeer. Now is the time of year Santa begins to choose the best of his herd to take him on his Christmas Eve spin around the world. This exclusive photo was sent by Holly Berry, special Times staff correspondent who accompanied Arctic Explorer Captain F. E. Klein Schmidt leading the Times' expedition to find Santa Claus. Berry will also get an exclusive movie of Santa to be shown Indianapolis children.

Read These Rules, Then Write to Santa Claus

Are you the Indianapolis boy or girl who is going to win one of the cash prizes The Times is offering for the best 100-word letter on "Why I like Santa Claus"? Here are the rules:

1. Sit right down and write not more than 100 words on WHY I LIKE SANTA CLAUS.
2. Include in your idea what you think Santa does that helps the world.
3. Mail your letter to The Santa Claus Editor of The Times, Indianapolis, Ind.
4. It will be forwarded immediately to Santa Claus at North Poleville, Eskimoland, and Holly Berry. The Times correspondent has made arrangements for Santa to judge the letters and radiogram the winners' names right back.
5. The prizes will be: First, $25; second, $10; and third, $5, for the best letters.
6. All letters must be in The Times office for mailing up North by noon, Saturday, Nov. 26.

one brought down to date each night?" he asked.

Would we? I should say!

So, Tuesday I hope to be able to tell you some mighty interesting things about Santa's library. We understand he guards these books very carefully, but he seems to be such a kindly old fellow that maybe he will let me look up the records of some Indianapolis boys and girls. We'll see Tuesday!

WRECKS SHERIFF'S CAR

By United Press

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 21.—Sheriff Frank Daniels of Madison County is in the market today for a new official auto, following wrecking of his old car in a collision Saturday night with one occupied by Walter Ellis and Jack Beady, both of Muncie. Ellis, driving the other car, was fined $71 for driving while drunk.

All those in the two autos were bruised, including John Howell, who was being brought here from Sidney, Ohio, to face a delinquency charge.

Rheumatism Recipe

While serving with the American Army in France I was given a prescription for Rheumatism and Neuritis that has produced most gratifying results in thousands of cases. The prescription cost me nothing, so I ask nothing for it, but will send it free to any one who writes me. Ex-Sergeant Paul Case, Room 256 Quigg Bldg., Brockton, Mass.—Advertisement.

000 children with the record of each

OVATION GIVEN GRID CHAMPS

City Title Victory Cheered by Shortridge.

More than 2,000 Shortridge high school students left classes this morning at 10:30 for a jubilant march from the school to Monument Circle in celebration of their 19 to 0 defeat of Technical High School and their 33 to 0 victory over Manual Training High School in the City Public High School championship football series.

With the school band leading students staged a snake dance to the Monument steps where the team was introduced. As each of the twenty-four gridiron warriors stepped to the fore, Circle buildings echoed the cheers.

George Buck, principal, introduced Emmett Rice, vice principal, and Dr. Herbert T. Wagner, alumnus and football squad physician, who gave short talks. Russell Julius, Fred Rouch and Lieut. Fred Naylor, assistant coaches, spoke. Alonzo Goldsberry, football mentor, thanked students for their support.

The celebration ended as students reported back at school to be dismissed for the day.

BIBLE READING EVENT

By Times Special

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., Nov. 21.—More than 100 persons will take part in a reading of the entire New Testament to start at the United Brethren Church here at 3 o'clock Tuesday morning and continue through the day until the reading is complete, expected about 8 p. m.

CHILD CAUGHT COLD -PNEUMONIA FEARED

Worried Mother Grateful as Clinic Shows How to Give Quick Relief at Home

A safe, sure method of treating colds—so pleasant children love it—is now being recommended for home use by physicians because of its splendid record in hospital, private practice and in so many Indianapolis homes.

Vast numbers of mothers here have found that it brings the same quick, sure and lasting relief that came to little Tessie, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Walker. She caught a severe cold while out playing on a drizzly day.

Next morning her chest was tight, nose stopped up and temperature was high. By noon congestion was settling in her bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Walker called her doctor. He immediately ordered the child to bed and prescribed hourly doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a concentrated mixture