

Injustice Exists When Minor Children Assist With Family's Support

BY MARTHA LEE

"WHAT have you ever done for me?" wailed a wife of her drunken husband.

"Haven't I given you two fine children to support you?" he replied, indignantly.

These, or similar lines, appear in a play, and they ably illustrate the attitude of some parents. As a matter of fact, parents have no right whatever to expect support of their children.

Children are brought into the world without their own volition and they are entitled to care and support from parents or from the State until they are of age and able to stand on their own feet. For such care and support they owe parents or State, nothing.

Parents who hang around their children's necks like millstones after they are adults are bad enough, but parents who expect minor children to contribute to the upkeep of the household and to help support their younger brothers and sisters are unspeakable weaklings and should be reported to the authorities.

Children who are expected to shoulder the economic burden of a family for whose existence they are not responsible have every right to revolt. If they are of age, they have a right to leave home and live by their own efforts. If they are not of age, the best thing they can do is to appeal to some social service agency.

Her Mother Fussies

Dear Martha Lee: I am a girl 14 years old. I start to high school every morning, my mother fusses at me to stay home and says I have some boy that I go to school to see. Today she got mad at me because I wouldn't go to the trunk and take and take for my clothes and coat. I haven't got any coat, but I did have one and she burned it up because I wouldn't ask for another one.

I am too big to go and ask people for things. I am six feet tall and people think I ought to work and buy my own things, but I can't because I am just about 14 years old yet. When I tell my mother that my father ought to clothe me, she says, "eat, all he makes up there are four children smaller than I am, and I know I don't do that."

My older brother works in a factory and he hates me because I have dark hair and he has got dark black. Please give me some help for I am in great trouble.

TROUBLED GREEN EYES.

The first thing that I want you to remember is that your mother is probably worn out about half the time and does not mean what she says. Try to win her to your side by treating her with sweetness and consideration. You know what it means to "heap coils of fire" on her head, do you not?

I think you should have some help from a social service agency. Do not be afraid to explain your problem to the trunk officer. I admire you very much for your hesitancy in asking for clothes. But, as you say, you are not sixteen yet, and you will have to help from someone. You can pay it all back by helping someone else when you get on your own feet.

Take my advice and show the trunk officer this letter, and ask her to tell you what to do.

Mother Is Lazy

Dear Martha Lee: I am a high school girl. I go to school in the mornings, but have to work at home in the afternoon and nights. We have a big house, and I have to do most of the washing, watch the kids and take care of the house. At night I get dinner and feed the little kids and wash the dishes. Then I try to get my lessons. I have to put the kids to bed and wait on my father, who gets drunk all the time and won't give me hardly any money or things I need. My mother is lazy and makes me do all the work.

I feel sorry for the kids, but I don't think all this is my job as I did not bring the kids into the world nor pick out my mother or mother-in-law. I am just about 14, I can't stand this any longer. Do you think it would be all right for me to run away from home?

I haven't any place to go and I think kids are hard to get, but I will kill myself if I have to stand this any longer.

I do not blame you for resenting this situation as it is very unjust. But I would not advise you to run away from home because you might get into a worse situation. At least, do not go without acting on the advice of some trustworthy older person.

Have you no friend among your school teachers who would be willing to talk to your parents and try to arrange more leisure time for you? If you have not, seek out some social service worker, and she will help you solve your problem. I agree with you that you must have help and this is the quickest way to get it.

THE CONNOISSEUR

There is hardly any justice, Mr. Van de View believes. In the wives of femininity and all that it achieves. For he's bought enough insurance to submerge an ocean liner. All because each lady salesman made him think that hers was finer.

Mr. Van de View Buys Insurance

"But I have abundant policies," he patiently insisted. To the first engaging lady who discreetly had him listed. But her arguments were clever and her frock was better still. 'Twas after all the sheerest tweed made him sign against his will.

SAUCILY LOOPED

By the time the third assailed him he had no resistance left. And of arguments and opposition clearly was bereft. She even might have sold him all the European debt. For the dress that she was wearing—'twas a tailored wool georgette.

Shower and Party for Bride to Be

Mrs. Noble C. Hilgenberg, 3841 N. Capitol Ave., entertained Monday evening with a bridge party and shower in honor of Miss Marian Alice Hilgenberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hilgenberg, 1428 Park Ave., whose marriage to Harold Richard Victor will take place Dec. 10.

The flowers, ices and confections were carried out in the pastel shades. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. C. A. Hilgenberg, Mrs. John Victor and Mrs. Sarah Wager. The guests were:

Misses: Helen Coffey, Mary M. Miller, Helen Patton, Alice Hollingsworth, Floye Hill, Dorothy Crosby, Dorothy Patterson, Martha Baker, Lorne McComb, Cecelia McDermott, Misses: Helen Patton, Alice Hollingsworth, Floye Hill, Dorothy Crosby, Dorothy Patterson, Martha Baker, Lorne McComb, Cecelia McDermott, Misses: Helen Patton, Alice Hollingsworth, Floye Hill, Dorothy Crosby, Dorothy Patterson, Martha Baker, Lorne McComb, Cecelia McDermott.

Roast Turkey

When turkey is ready for the oven, rub surface all over with salt, then cover with melted fat. Over the fat dust as much flour as the fat will hold and put in a very hot oven. When it starts to brown, add two cups of hot water in which has been blended two tablespoons of honey. Reduce the heat and cook slowly until done—about three hours. It should be basted every fifteen or twenty minutes and when about half done, turn it occasionally to brown evenly; add water and honey mixture as often as necessary to keep enough in the pan for basting. When tender and brown, remove from fire, brush lightly with honey and butter mixture (one-fourth honey and three-fourths butter). Decorate with parsley, celery curls and radish buds. Serve at once.

Mary Wall Married in Home Rite

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Wall, 3333 Kenwood Ave., was the scene Monday evening of the wedding of their daughter Mary to David C. Bixler, Chicago. Dr. J. Ambrose Dunkel performed the ceremony before an improvised altar of palms, ferns and oak leaves lighted with seven-branch candelabra. The stairway down which the bride party came was roped with smilax and there was a bank of greenery at the fire-place. Proceeding the ceremony Mrs. Alberta McCann Gaunt, harpist, played a bridal program and during the ceremony she played "To a Wild Rose." Mrs. Jane Johnson Burroughs sang "Love's Coronation," and "The Wedding Hymn of Delta Delta Delta."

Attended by Sister

Miss Joan Wall, sister of the bride, was her only attendant and wore pink chiffon velvet fashioned with basque waist and skirt of uneven hemline, longer in the back and lined with pink crepe. The dress was sleeveless and the neck line was in a low point in back and front. She wore a crystal and pearl necklace, the gift of the bride, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and butterfly roses. Her slippers matched her dress.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white chiffon velvet with bateau neckline and long tight sleeves. The gown had a basque waist and uneven skirt, longer in the back and lined with white crepe. Her veil was fashioned with a head-dress of four rows of orange blossoms and caught at the back with the blossoms. Her shower bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies. James C. Wade, of Chicago, was best man.

The ceremony was followed by a reception. In the dining room a three-tiered wedding cake formed the centerpiece of the table which was lighted by four white tapers in crystal holders. Mrs. Wall, mother of the bride, received in a gown of orchid transparent velvet and wore a shoulder corsage of butterfly roses and orchid sweet peas.

Will Live in Chicago

Mr. and Mrs. Bixler will live at a wedding trip and will be at home after Jan. 1 at the South Shore Club apartment, Chicago. The bride traveled in a blue crepe sport dress with hat to match and coat of Venice cloth with black wolf collar and cuffs. Her gloves, bag and shoes were black.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Grace Turman Bixler, mother of the bridegroom; Mrs. Lucille Turman, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Pritchett and Mrs. Perry Pritchett, Cynthia; Robert Turman, Bloomington; George R. Fisher, Chicago; Dr. and Mrs. L. W. Kirtley, Lebanon; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Crawley, Danville, Ill.; and Miss Chloel Bixler, Bedford.

Woollen Tells Club Women About Banks

The business of banking should be regarded by the bank patron as intricate, but not mysterious, according to the view of Evans Woollen Jr., assistant to the president of the Fletcher Savings and Trust Company, who spoke Monday afternoon to the class in applied education of the Woman's Department Club at the clubhouse, 1702 N. Meridian St., on "The Banker's Relation With His Client."

"Details of the banking business," he said, "while open to your inquiry and understanding, do not offer a profitable field for your study. The business, however, demands your understanding. It is a part of good citizenship to understand it."

He pointed out that the banking business perhaps stands alone in the field of business endeavor, due to its quasi-professional nature.

The professional side of our business appears in the necessity for a reciprocal confidence between the banker and his client. The banker does not have many wares on his counter for sale to the unidentified transient, as does the merchant. His ability to serve his patron is in direct ratio with his knowledge of his patron's affairs and his confidence in his patron's integrity. The client's capacity to profit from his banker's service is in direct ratio with his confidence in his banker. This relation, when at its ideal, is the fine fruit of the banking profession. Under these circumstances, established jointly by banker and client, the bank takes its rightful position as a factor in the common welfare.

"It is needless to say that the banker, being a human being, sometimes errs on his side of the relation. He is subject to faulty judgment, irritation or discouragement. He may be in some cases unfit for his position. The quality in the profession is quite as subject to irregularity as in the professions of law, medicine or the ministry. The layman selects his attorney or his physician with the utmost discretion of which he is capable. A similar discrimination in banking connections will lead to an improvement in the profession."

BEAUTY HOW and WHY

SHOULD THE HAIR BE DYED? THE ANSWER

BY ANN ALYSIS

When the advance of age calls for greater care and closer attention to all phases of appearance, one of the first questions to arise is this:

Should we dye our hair?

If you ask me, yes. Why should we not take advantage of any and everything that will improve our looks? Greying hair is a sign that cannot be denied. All the talk about mother being grey at 25, sister at 30, no matter how true it may be, makes no impression on the observant listener. It only means that you are unconsciously erecting a defense against the approach of that arch-enemy, Time. In this day of fashionable frankness, let us do frank.

We will suppose now, that upon looking at yourself closely in the mirror, you discover that time has insidiously sprinkled considerable grey in your hair, and that the effect is far from pleasing.

You have noticed other persons to whom grey hair seemed to lend added dignity. That is true, but they have reached the point where there is more grey than black, while your changing tresses are of that yellowish, iron variety and just enough of them present, to spoil the party.

How about dyeing it, or tinting it, as it is now called? That is the thing to do, provided it can be done artistically. It helps you retain a claim to youth and in that way bolsters up your morale. And in this world of competition, anything that bolsters morale is good.

But, you say, are not dyes dangerous? Some are, yes; but so is radium and too much sugar. Used properly, they are all right. And some dyes, such as those made of walnut shells and henna and other harmless vegetables, are perfectly safe.
