

SLACK DENIES HE IS BUILDING UP 'MACHINE'

'But I'll Put in Democrats,' Mayor Tells Members of Club.

"I'm not interested in building up either a personal or political machine at City Hall; but where I can do it, and defend it before the public, I'll put in Democrats."

Mayor L. Ert Slack thus answered critics and explained his policy on administration changes in addressing Democratic State, County and city officials at a luncheon in his honor at the Indiana Democratic Club Tuesday.

"When I took office," he declared, "only about fifty of the 1,300 city employees were Democrats. There were 125 more Republicans than Democrats in the police department, and a Republican majority of 138 in the fire department."

Right to Equal Division
"Citizens generally believe I had a right to make a more nearly equal division. Despite everything I might do in the next two years, there still would be a majority of Republicans on the city pay roll."

The mayor's only reference to the council's threat to rescind its action which placed him in the mayor's chair, was:

"I might analyze and answer why certain things that are happening, but I've not got to the place where I have to think about them or explain. Some day I may do it of my own volition."

Mayor Slack cited as the "seven real troubles" he has had in the mayoralty:

1. Lack of acquaintance with men best qualified for city posts, due to close attention to his law practice and duties while district attorney.
2. Distressing number of unemployed in "this time called prosperity," which in reality is a state of mind for purposes I'll not discuss.
3. Difficulty of "selling" myself to the public because of a general prevalent, wholesale lack of confidence in government here.
4. Task of "surrounding myself with an absolutely loyal organization without losing the confidence or incurring the suspicions of the public."
5. Hesitancy of working "in the spotlight." "If you don't think I'll be as careful about this job as a mother with a new born babe, you mistake my femininity," he said.
6. Lack of a "sympathetic press."
7. Difficulty and regret of having to choose between friends and capable men to fill appointive posts.

Michael E. Foley, member of the city park board and the State prison board, and John W. Holtzman, corporation counsel, endorsed Evans Woolen for the presidency; and Frank C. Daley for the governorship, predicting their election if nominated.

Shoo! Shoo!

'Woman' Seeking Hats Wears Man's Shoes That Depart Rapidly.

WHEN a man dresses as a woman and pretends to be interested in millinery, there is something wrong, police believe.

Therefore, they are looking for the man, garbed as a woman, who inspected hats at the Rhode Millinery Company store, 314 E. Washington St., Tuesday.

He probably was a burglar, planning a robbery, they say.

A store employee told police the supposed woman came in and nodded that she wished to be shown hats, but refused to speak.

While the hats were being brought out, the "woman" walked about the store and peered into the workroom, probably to learn the arrangement of the rear doors.

When the "woman" spoke twice, saying "yes" and "no" in a cooing voice, the employee noticed the "woman" wore man's shoes. As the employee stared at the shoes, the customer left hurriedly.

MINERS CHARGE RAILROADS TRY TO RUIN UNION

Pennsylvania Road Closes Mines by Price Edict, Leaders Assert.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—A "railroad-coal company conspiracy" to refuse to buy Indiana coal produced by union miners has resulted in keeping thousands of miners out of work in the Indiana field and has kept the mines idle, it was charged by representatives of the United Mine Workers of America in a statement to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today.

The union chiefs asked the committee to take up Senator Johnson's resolution for an investigation into the disturbances in the coal industry. The Pennsylvania Railroad was accused of being the leader in the Indiana situation, but the New York Central and the B. & O. were charged with joint responsibility.

"In Indiana, representatives of the Pennsylvania Railroad encouraged the Indiana producers to resist the making of a wage agreement at the Miami (Fla.) conference of operators and miners of the central competitive field in February, 1927," the statement said.

Call Logsdon Leader

"E. D. Logsdon, president of the Knox County Consolidated Coal Company of Indiana, large producers of fuel coal for the Pennsylvania Railroad, assumed leadership of the Indiana operators and organized the Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' Association for resistance to the making of a new wage agreement and to beat down wages," the statement continued.

"Since the official termination of the strike in Indiana and Illinois, the Logsdon interests, the Pike County Coal Company and other mines heretofore supplying railroad fuel for the Pennsylvania have declined to resume operations, because the Pennsylvania Railroad refuses to place any orders with these mines for railroad fuel mined under the existing wage rate—the Jacksonville scale.

"The Pennsylvania railroad is fueling its lines in Indiana with coal brought in from the tremendous range of short waves. Signals from London are sometimes received twice by American stations—once across the Atlantic and again a tenth of a second later after a trip around the world the other way.

Experts said these waves do not often interfere in the vicinity of the sending station, being sometimes almost inaudible, but at a distance from 1,000 to 25,000, they may cause great trouble.

Thus, if radio operators of a foreign country were incensed over American interference, they could entirely disrupt American communication if they wished. This was pointed out in emphasis of the great need to avoid foreign interference.

PRESENT CLAIMS TO LONG-RANGE RADIO WAVES

Public Priority Is Argued Before Federal Commission at Washington.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Pressure to obtain a Federal radio commission ruling that commercial radio companies serving the public have first claim to the valuable short-wave frequencies was seen here today, as the commission continued its conference with 140 of the leading radio users of the country.

Newspaper, press associations, and oil, rubber and ship companies, in addition to the Radio Corporation of America, the Mackay system and other commercial radio companies, have asked for authority to use the short wave, which are more economical and of greater range than the long waves now generally in use.

The commercial companies gave notice that they serve the entire public, and so must receive preference over private interests.

Hearings to End Today

The case actually is a re-hearing of the commission's action in refusing the San Francisco Examiner, a Hearst newspaper authority to use a short length for point-to-point land radio on the Pacific Coast.

Intervention of the many industries caused the commission to conduct an exhaustive investigation of the entire subject.

The hearings probably will conclude today.

Joseph Pierson, representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, is to present the newspaper's side of the case today.

Government officials and experts joined with commercial radio men in agreeing that facilities were limited. They pointed out that the law directed the President to designate frequencies for official stations, and that the frequencies allocated by the commission to private corporations must not conflict with the national defense, lifesaving and aviation weather services.

Waves Circle World

The situation is further complicated by the tremendous range of short waves. Signals from London are sometimes received twice by American stations—once across the Atlantic and again a tenth of a second later after a trip around the world the other way.

Experts said these waves do not often interfere in the vicinity of the sending station, being sometimes almost inaudible, but at a distance from 1,000 to 25,000, they may cause great trouble.

Thus, if radio operators of a foreign country were incensed over American interference, they could entirely disrupt American communication if they wished. This was pointed out in emphasis of the great need to avoid foreign interference.

TREASURER TO USE OLD TYPE INCOME BLANK

New Revenue Bill Cuts to Be Deducted From Later Payments.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The treasury, having won its victory to delay congressional action on a new revenue bill until after March 15, today ordered internal revenue collectors to send out old type blanks for taxpayers to use in filing their income tax returns by that date.

Officials said that should the new tax measure contain a retroactive clause granting a tax cut on 1927 incomes, the treasury would allow reductions on installments due June 15, Sept. 15 and Dec. 15.

Six types of blanks were ordered distributed by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair, as follows:

- 1—For individual returns on net incomes and salaries or wages of more than $5,000, or incomes regardless of amount from business, profession, rents or sale of property.
- 2—For individual incomes of not more than $5,000 derived chiefly from salaries and wages.
- 3—For life insurance companies' income tax returns.
- 4—For non-resident alien individual income tax returns.
- 5—For corporation income tax returns.
- 6—For farm income and expenses.

Officials estimated the March 15 tax collections would be about $500,000,000 this year, compared with $516,000,000 in 1927.

Advise Hospital Tested Method for Home Use—Many Here Relieved in Few Hours

Note: See other cases reported daily—all certified by a member of the hospital clinic.

A quick, pleasant and inexpensive method—endorsed by physicians for home use—brought to E. H. Garratt the same speedy relief which has been experienced by so many Indianapolis people who have used it for head colds, chronic coughs and deep seated chest colds.

Mr. Garratt, for example, had neglected his cold for a day or so after he had begun to sneeze and cough. Examination showed that one of his nasal tubes was badly congested, his throat was inflamed and the cold was spreading down towards his lungs, causing fear of pneumonia.

Doctors then gave him double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a concentrated mixture of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients which have relieved even the most extreme hospital cases. With the very first pleasant swallow he felt its comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest. Almost immediately his head and chest began to clear up and in a day or so, doctors report, all traces of the cough and cold were gone.
