MARYE and 'MOM'

THEIR LETTERS

By RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Dear Mother: I'm glad you told me about Betty. I didn't know. The girls and I don't correspond much. Of course I'll send the layette and ask Alan to send a check. I don't want him to think he has to be sneaky about it and with things as you say they are I know he wants to help.

But I think Florence is quite right to say Betty shouldn't have children if she can't give them a proper start in life. Wrecking her health for them isn't fair to the kids either. When they're growing up they like parents they can be proud of and not mothers and fathers who are old before their time.

I shall wait until we can afford a nursery and a nurse and then our children will be real blessings. Such children are much higher types than those who are brought up haphazardly. Everyone knows that. It's merely a matter of common sense.

Some of my friends go so far as to say that eugenics should be compulsory but I'm inclined to think that the difference between man and animals will always interfere with that. But even if we do still mate for love we can refuse to bring up our children like guinea pigs. And if there's anything that makes motherhood of its beauty it's the sight of a broken down woman with a bad mannered brat at her heels.

There's nothing noble about indulging your ego in having offspring when you can't give them a fair chance. And we recognize that it is largely aimed entirely, in fact, a matter of ego. It's just one of the truths that we've found out and not being too prudish to look life straight in the eye. Life's really such a glorious adventure that it deserves to be studied and lived intelligently. It's only man's blindness that messes it up.

I don't mean to say that modern married people don't love children just as much as any generation of parents ever did, but they don't claim the right to govern their birth and upbringing in the light of our broader knowledge. Hoping you don't suffer from the shock, I am,

With deepest love,
MARYE.

Budget Plan Best Method to Run Home

IN THE MATTER of household expenditures I believe every husband and wife should come to a definite agreement as to what the wife's allowance will be. I do not understand how any man can expect a woman to be economical and to save if he does not give her a certain sum of money with which to work.

When a woman has a certain amount to run her house on, she is able to draft a budget of her expenses and every modern woman realizes that the budget system is the most efficient way of keeping down bills. A budget enables a woman to say definitely just what her expenditures are, and when she does run over the amount of money she has planned to use, she can consult her budget and see where the difficulty is and then eliminate it.

Not Like Grandmother

No woman who has known the independence of having her own money can ever be happy the way grandmothers gently asked for "some money" whenever an occasion arose. The modern woman wants to know that she will have a certain amount of money that will not vary with the kind of day her husband had at the office.

Knowing the exact sum on which she is to run her household, the modern woman is able to avoid the old "money arguments" that used to shake the family when the bills came in too rapidly for the husband's liking.

Dear Mrs. L.:—I am constantly going to my husband asking him for money to run the house. He will give me a certain amount and then when it is gone, I have to ask him for more money. Though the sums are small, still he thinks I use too much to run the house. I never seem to know when to stop. I don't want to be like my mother, because I never am sure of the amount of money I have. Don't you think that an allowance would solve this difficulty?

Dear Mrs. S. L.:—Of course, an allowance is the solution of your problem. No woman can possibly know how much she spends if the money is doled out to her in varying sums. Her bills are really higher because she can not take advantage of the unexpected bargains that every woman sees now and then.

After you convince your husband of the wisdom of giving you an allowance, draft a budget of your expenses. Then if he asks you where your money goes, you will have the figures right there to show him.

Dear Mrs. Lee:—I am 16 and pretty. I am still in high school and my father wants me to finish my course, but I don't really like school. I have a few friends who are pretty clothes. I have dates who are smart. My father makes me be in my school and on Sunday by 11 o'clock. Do you think I would be right for me to leave school in spite of what my father says? I have blue eyes and brown hair. What color should I wear? I like red.

Dear Mary Alice:—Your family is right in advising you to finish your high school course. Almost all the business houses require at least high school graduates as their employees. By finishing your studies you will be able to earn a much better salary later.

Your family has the right to limit your dates. I think two dates a week is sufficient for a girl your age. The hours your father has given you are excellent ones.

A person with your coloring wears blue very well. Other shades you can wear are rose, tan, brown, warm gray and blue greens.

S. M. R.—The acceptance of an informal invitation on the hostesses' calling card is also written on the guest's card. Merely write "acceptance" and the date in one corner. Small envelopes to fit the calling card may be purchased at any stationery store.
