

Known Power of Love for Husband Will Clear Baby Cheater of Greed

BY MRS. WALTER FERGUSON
NO MATTER how sorry one may feel for Mrs. Myron Boyer of Detroit, it will be hard to sanction her method of making her husband happy.

Mr. Boyer has asked State officials to delete the birth record of the 4-year-old boy, whom he believed to be his son, and charges his wife with having smuggled another woman's child into his home, pretending it was their own.

The wife pleads guilty, confesses that she bought the baby from a hotel chambermaid and insists further that she is not ashamed. Her action, she says, was prompted by a wish to bring joy to her husband, who had long wanted a child.

Women sometimes will go to strange lengths to keep the interest and devotion of the men they love. The wife, who because of some accident of nature can not give her husband the son for which he longs, is greatly to be pitied. Hers must be a gnawing and continuous grief. But to build one's house of happiness upon the shifting sands of falsehood is always a mistake. The heart may forgive this woman, but the head never can. "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive," said Walter Scott a long time ago.

Husbands, to an extent, are always at the mercy of their wives where the question of paternity is concerned. Sometimes it is indeed a wise father that knows his own child. And to deceive where love and trust and even souls may be at stake is to deceive, indeed. The wife who trifles with such deep and tragic secrets is certain to overstep the mark and work unending woe for herself.

Had Mrs. Boyer resigned herself to the inevitable and persuaded her husband to adopt a child, a happy family might have been the result. She may be charged with seeking to acquire a family fortune, but women who know how powerful a thing love for a husband may be, will surely exonerate her for that.

Variations in Test of Girl's Love

BY MARTHA LEE

Perhaps the most puzzling thing for a young man to decide is whether or not his "girl" loves him. Many of my young readers write asking me how to tell "for sure" the state of a girl's affections.

Of course, there is no one way to advise any young man by which he can tell in daisy-like manner whether the young woman loves him or loves him not. Girls are such uncertain creatures, you know; they react to a situation in all kinds of ways.

In most cases, however, if a young man proposes he can find out just where he stands. If the girl consents to an engagement, it is the best "sign" for few girls will chafe all other suitors unless really business is meant.

Other indications that a girl's heart has been touched are a rather maternal solicitude about the young man's health, because every girl likes to mother the man she loves, a willingness to break her other "dates" when the young man wants her to "do things" with him, and a certain possessive air which she speaks of the young man and his belongings.

These, young men, are merely hints. There are many other ways of divining the girl's true feelings, but the young man himself will have to discover the particular signs that apply to his personal case.

Dear Miss Lee: I am in love with a girl who works where I am. Miss Lee, this girl does not pay much attention to me, but she tells other girls that she likes me. However, she won't tell me how to tell me what I want to know.

Dear Lonesome Feffty: Even though the young girl of today boasts of her emancipation from this, that and the other, a few of these modern misses are reluctant to confess that they really are in love. These bashful girls are unusual enough that the modern young man is perplexed as to how to judge them.

Perhaps this girl is one of these few, my friend. Ask her for many "dates" and her bashfulness will leave her as she gets to know you better. Then you can propose and if she accepts you will know that she has given you all the proof in the world that she really loves you.

Do not worry about this girl's failing to notice you when you are both working. Most clever business girls realize that during office hours personal affairs should be laid aside.

Dear Miss Lee: I am in love with a girl and I would do anything for her. But she won't let me see her. After all, I think this girl cares for me because she told some other fellows that she did. Must I keep on trying to get her or should I give up?

Pug T.: Perhaps you are not an eligible young man for matrimony. Are you making enough to support a wife yet? Maybe this girl realizes that it would be a long time before you could make enough to afford a wife, and she knows how futile it would be to settle down and just have dates with you.

Young men's affections have been known to change after a few years when you are in a position to marry, you might have lost the love you have for this girl. By that time the girl would know no other young man and she would be left as the young moderns say, "holding the bag."

If you really love this girl you will be content to keep on paying attentions to her. Remember, often a "Faithful Fido" comes out a winner over far more cashing competitors because the girl has the intelligence to see that constant devotion is a better than the perhaps breath-taking courtship that lasts only a few weeks and then dies down, leaving, maybe, several months later and going through the same cycle again.

NANCY KNOWS HER ONIONS

"Another of life's little contradictions" is what Nancy Carroll, cinema scintillant, says of stuffed onions, her favorite luncheon dish. "I say that because it is such a surprise to find onions so delicate a dish," she explains.

Nancy learned her onions before she saw a footlight. "I've changed mother's recipe only a little—but I've called it onion farce and veal," says Nancy, and this is the way she cooks it:

Peel six large Bermudas and remove a part of the inside. Put in a saucepan, cover with boiling water and let boil six minutes. Drain, stuff with veal farce meat and place in a pan on six large slices of fat salt pork. Pour around one cup brown or chicken stock and bake until onions are soft—about 30 minutes.

Veal farce meat: finely chop one-half cup raw veal. Add six tablespoons finely chopped fat salt pork and one-half cup bread crumbs, cooked three minutes with one tablespoon butter and one tablespoon finely chopped onion. Beat one egg slightly and add to mixture when it is blended. Season properly.

Family Menus

BY SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST—Stewed dried peaches, cereal, cream, tomato omelet, crisp toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Beef broth with carrot dumplings, apple sauce, raisin bread, coconut tapioca pudding, milk tea.

DINNER—Stuffed baked sparrows, candied sweet potatoes, combination cabbage salad, canned pears, fudge cake, milk, coffee.

These are all simple, inexpensive menus calculated not to make too large a hole in the housekeeping budget. The sparrows are stuffed with a meat and vegetable forcemeat. The combination makes a savory dish sure to be "relished" on a formidable late-winter evening. Coconut tapioca pudding is good with fresh-grated or canned coconut.

Cocoanut Tapioca Pudding
Three tablespoons quick cooking tapioca, 2 tablespoons cornmeal, 1/2 cup grated coconut, 1/2-teaspoon salt, 2 1/2 cups milk, 1/4-cup brown sugar.

Heat milk in double boiler. Mix tapioca, cornmeal, coconut, sugar and salt and stir into hot milk. Cook over hot water until mixture thickens. Turn into a buttered dish and bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven. Chill and serve with plain cream.

A. A. Thomas, Mesdames L. Roy Zapf, Vera Franks, Nora Phares, Bernard Keltner, Misses W. Wilcox Jr., Gertrude Brown.

BEAUTY HOW and WHY MODIFICATIONS OF THE SQUARE FACE

BY ANN ALYSIS

The square type of face is capable of many modifications. In the matter of size alone there are three distinct divisions, to say nothing of the innumerable changes caused by combinations with other typical features.

If the square face is long it is entirely different in expression from the short square type, which type needs distinctive arrangement of dress and hair. The square face of short or medium length is not likely to give the same impression of severity and sternness as the long square type.

Should your facial lines follow the short square form, not modified by an oval or a tapering chin, dress the hair with a view to adding length to the outline, and comb it to a soft becoming curve over the forehead, thus breaking the too straight lines of your type, and adding the charm of the undulating wave.

As with the longer square type described in a previous article, avoid square neck lines and cleave to the very becoming pointed or rounded styles.
