

NEVADA PLANS NEW GAS HOUSE

Will Erect Death Building to Insure Safety.

By Times Special
CARSON CITY, Nev., March 6.—A new "gas house" will be ready for Nevada's next murderer, according to plans of the State prison board.

The new structure was proposed to make lethal gas executions safe for witnesses.

The structure used in two previous executions, the only two carried out since Nevada's novel method of execution was adopted, was constructed in 1872 and remodeled to serve its new purpose.

However, the house leaked and at the second execution witnesses were imperiled. One woman newspaper correspondent was overcome by the lethal fumes.

Other purposes will be served by the new structure. It will be removed from the center of the prison yard, which is a large excavation in sandstone formation, and placed near the cliffs that form the walls of the prison.

The move will prevent necessity of a long death walk from the cells to the lethal room.

Prison officials also believed that moving the house would facilitate disposition of the perilous gas.

The proposed house will be smaller than the one now used, and will be more quickly filled with the vapors.

Rheumatism Pains Ended By Konjola Says Man Age 82

New Medicine Completely Relieved Every Ache and Pain, He Declares.

The extent to which this new Konjola medicine is helping the people of Indianapolis and nearby towns has become the talk of the drug and medical trade of this section. Thronging are calling daily to see the Konjola Man at Hook's drug store, Illinois and Washington Sts., this city, and hear his personal explanation of this surprising compound. At the same time a never ending stream of voluntary endorsements and reports are being received from local people, describing the remarkable benefits they have derived from the use of this medicine. Recently the Konjola Man said:

"This compound has proven vastly more effective in thousands of cases of ill-health than any previously known medicine. In this new day of science the medicine first must cleanse the system of all poisons and this must be done through the kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels. It takes a liquid preparation to do these things. In making Konjola we selected the juices of twenty-two of nature's plants and herbs."

One of the latest residents of this section to make a public endorsement of Konjola is Mr. E. F. Corbitt, 209 North Warner Ave., who is widely acquainted in Indianapolis.

"Konjola is a wonderful medicine," said Mr. Corbitt. "It energized my whole system and built me up so that I am feeling better in general than I have in years."

"My whole body was in a weakened condition and I was constantly bothered with a terrible cough that shook my entire body. I had rheumatism so bad in my arms that I could hardly raise them to my face, and really had little use of them. The aches and pains were so bad that I would lie awake at night suffering and unable to sleep. I was getting worse every day and I began to think that because of my age, you see I am 82 years old, I would never be able to get my health back again."

"Of course, the worst thing about my case was the fact that I could never find a medicine to help me. When I heard of Konjola I had no idea it would really end my troubles, but I made up my mind to try it anyway and now this statement will speak for itself. I am feeling like I never had a sick day in my life. Konjola has put new life in my arms and since I started taking this medicine all the aches and pains are gone. At my age I think it is remarkable that I can enjoy such good health. All my rheumatism is gone and I haven't been bothered with a cough for some time. My wife and I both claim it is the best thing that ever happened to us when we found Konjola."

"It is really a pleasure to endorse a medicine which brings so much health to suffering humanity."

The Konjola Man is at Hook's drug store, Illinois and Washington Sts., Indianapolis, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Konjola is being sold in large quantities at all Hook drug stores, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Advertisement.

COL. CHAS. A. LINDBERGH'S OWN LIFE STORY

By CHAS. A. LINDBERGH

THE STORY SO FAR
Lindbergh completed his education at the University of Wisconsin where he became interested in aviation. Later he entered a flying school and flew with a barnstorming outfit as a wing walker and parachute jumper.

He bought a Jenny plane and flew through Texas and the South. Lindbergh became interested in government aviation and applied for enlistment in the United States Army. He took examinations in January, 1924, and entered the school in March. Before entering the school he went on a barnstorming and pleasure tour through the South with Leon Klink.

Lindbergh was just one of 104 cadets, and was among the adventures and trials of the older cadets who were going to Keesler Field. But he took upon himself the discipline to learn the finer points of flying.

Strict training methods threw fear into the hearts of most cadets, but Lindbergh passed initial tests because of his previous experience. Only eighteen in the class of 104 "got the wings."

Training at Brooks Field progressed, and Lindbergh earned the additional experience in flying all types of planes from the small propeller to the big bomber. Cadets played many pranks on each other to relieve the grind of study, and Lindbergh played a pole cat in the first sergeant's pillow.

Lindbergh was transferred to Kelly Field September, 1924. This training became more difficult. Shortly after the course started, he nearly was "washed out" of the school. But he proved that he was not at fault and "Another trick on the first sergeant made the monotony of camp life for Lindbergh. Stunts in all kinds of planes were inaugurated, and then the cadets took up target practice with machine guns and bombs. Cross country flights were the most cherished events in the cadet's lives."

After a few weeks of gunnery practice and bomb throwing, the corps took a cross country flight to the Gulf. There one of the cadets "fell in the ocean while playing on the rocks. Lindbergh and his companions fished him out, and sent him back to the airport minus his clothes."

While flying in formation at Kelly field, Lindbergh's plane locked wings with another plane and both crashed to the ground in flames. Both pilots saved themselves with a long parachute jump. Within half an hour Lindbergh was back in the air with another plane.

Lindbergh was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Service Reserve and was assigned to the 1st Pursuit Squadron. He made his second parachute jump to save his plane from crashing. He was awarded a "Distinguished Flying Cross" for "keeping the pilot from growing old."

CHAPTER XX
THE International Air Races were to be held, that year, at New York during the first part of October and, since our fair contracts were over by the last of September, we decided to enter in the "On to New York" competition, which was for civilian planes only, and was decided by points given for distance, speed, number of passengers

Is Thirty The Love Deadline?

And Now That Reminds Ring Lardner of a Scotch Story.

BY RING LARDNER

PROFESSOR DURANT'S pronouncement, which started this brawl, reminds me of the familiar story of the two Scotchmen, all named Sandy. It seems that one of them was walking along the main street of Glasgow without an umbrella in a driving rainstorm. He was asked by a bairn (policeman) and locked up in the kiltie (jail).

He sent for his friend Sandy. "Weel, weel, Sandy," said Sandy, "wot be you-all doin' in the kiltie?" "Ah be here for trekkin' in de rain wi' no umbrella," said Sandy. "But, mon, they canna put ye in jail for dot!" remonstrated Sandy. "They canna, but they hae," dreed Sandy.

A man, says Dr. Durant, can not fall in love after the age of thirty. All right; he can't. But does he? I will recount a case which recently came under my personal observation and leave the answer to the jury that tried Remus.

GEORGE GADGET was a junior at Groton. It seemed kind of funny calling him a junior, because he was seventy-three years old. He had been a student at Groton for fifty-nine years. He wasn't as dumb as this sounds; he merely was economical.

Staying there saved him the expense of going back to reunions. And besides, his instructor in spelling, who was a great hockey fan and loved to see Groton win, kept flunking him so he couldn't graduate and leave the school without a capable coach.

Gadget had been goalie on the varsity team for half a century and during the last twenty years of this period, none of Groton's opponents had been able to shoot the puck through his beard for a goal.

Gadget never had gone with girls. He was looked on by his buddies as a misogynist. It was a great surprise to them, therefore, when he got up in reading class one morning and announced his engagement to Miss Hazel Taffeta of Loudanum, N. J.

Miss Taffeta was an alumnae of Bryn Mawr, where she had been a classmate of Jane Addams and Mrs. Whiffen. She was now 81 and Dartmouth just had elected her snow queen of its winter carnival. In fulfillment of her duty in seeing that the snow was kept off the streets of college towns, she visited Groton and met Gadget.

"Hello, girly," said the latter. "Hello, goalie," said Miss Taffeta. "I hear you are a misogynist." "And I hear you are a confirmed spinster," retorted Gadget. "Let's celibate," suggested Miss Taffeta.

THE pair thus began their acquaintance in a spirit of railery, but in less than a week their relations had lost all semblance of mere good fellowship and they were acting like two or more turtle doves.

Gadget sent her candy, flowers, darning letters, new electric bulbs, tooth paste and hair restorer.

She sent him a patent beard hanger and spent an hour under his window every night, trying to tune a guitar, but most of the while she just sat out in front of the Elks Hotel and languished, doing it so well that the school regents asked her to remain at Groton as language teacher.

They were married and George asked her where she would like to go for a honeymoon. She inquired whether he ever had been at Niagara Falls. He replied that he had been there when it was just a leak; in fact, he had telephoned the plumber about it.

If the plumber had got there promptly, there wouldn't have been any trouble. Personally he would just as soon watch the water run into the bathtub, but if she wanted to go there, he would pay her expenses and while she was gone, try to brush up in his spelling.

He wanted to be graduated now, and get out in the world and make his way.

George Gadget did not marry Hazel Taffeta for money. She had none. He did not marry her for social position. She had none. He did not marry her to obtain a housekeeper. He had no house. He did not marry her for her looks. She was terrible.
