

INDIANA GROUP OF WALTONITES TO BOOST PARK

Support Is Pledged Project for Banks of Upper Tippecanoe.

Support of the Indiana Chapter of the Izaak Walton League for the proposed plan of the Department of Conservation to turn the banks of the upper Tippecanoe into a great river park, affording sanctuary to birds and game, will be pledged at a meeting of Waltonians at Rochester, March 27.

Announcement of the meeting and its purpose was made known today by Charles Biederwolf, Supreme Court clerk and president of the Indiana division of the league.

Many chapter heads have taken the matter up with Biederwolf since announcement of the plan for the sanctuary, and "because conservation work in general and augmentation of wild life in particular are part of our organization's creed, we are firmly behind this movement," he said.

The Tippecanoe river park as proposed will extend on either side of this typical Indiana stream for about eighty miles, through Pulaski, Fulton, Marshall and Kosciusko Counties.

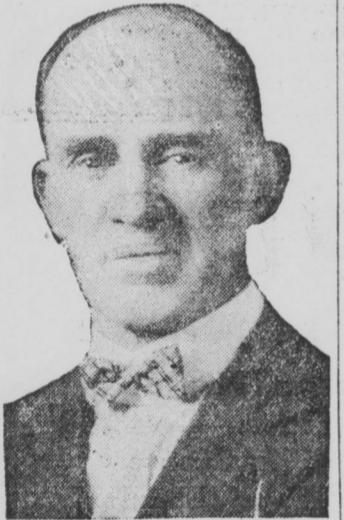

"This river," said Biederwolf, "is one of the few existing great river tracts wherein wild life may reproduce and find sanctuary without molestation. In turn, as small wild animals and game birds multiply, it is only natural the increase will spread to the surrounding countryside, to stock the land for many miles."

"The placid, peaceful river is unspoiled by the usual contamination of modern cities and with its strip of natural woodland on each side will form a beautiful park for Hoosiers and tourists."

More Residents of Indianapolis Praise Konjola

Another Local Man Says It Was the First Medicine That Ended His Health Troubles.

Thousands of testimonials have come to the Konjola Man from people in every section of Indiana. Most of these testimonials are from the city of Indianapolis, because the Konjola Man is here in person at the Hook Drug Store, Illinois and

MR. TERRY HOCKERSMITH

Washington Sts., where over a hundred people visit him daily to find out for themselves about this surprising new compound.

Many druggists in this section declare that nothing like Konjola was ever known to the public before. This medicine is helping thousands of men and women who were never benefited by any remedy or treatment before. This accounts for the great number of voluntary endorsements by the people of Indianapolis.

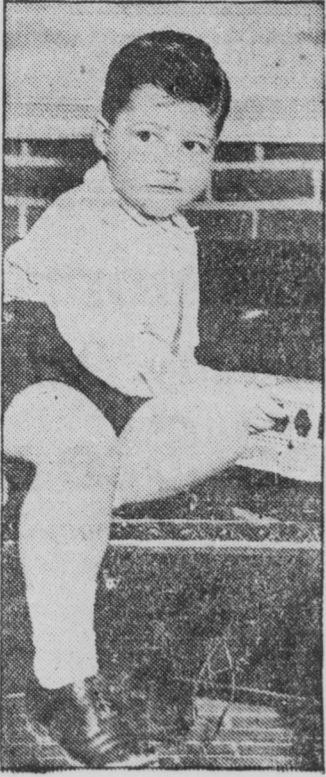

Just a few days ago Mr. Terry Hockersmith, 136 W. New York St., this city, made the following statement about Konjola:

"I can tell the world that I feel like a new man since taking Konjola," said Mr. Hockersmith. "I was certainly surprised to get such results from one small remedy after spending a fortune on other treatments and getting nothing for the money I spent. My main trouble was a heavy feeling in the stomach, which was followed by gas and terrible pains, which seemed to settle in the pit of my stomach. I could not sleep but a few minutes at a time. I was always tired, sluggish and dizzy. My bowels were very inactive and I was troubled with headaches. This trouble kept getting worse and worse until I hardly knew what to do."

"My mother first began taking Konjola for a trouble similar to mine and in a short time her entire system was very much improved. After seeing what this medicine was doing for her, I decided I would try it, and that decision proved to be worth very much to me. As the results I have obtained, you can judge for yourself. I eat what I want without suffering any pain, my bowels are regular, the headaches are gone, I sleep like a top, the tired, sluggish feeling is gone and the heaviness in my stomach is a thing of the past. I give all the credit to Konjola for this wonderful relief. I highly recommend this medicine to all sufferers, as it has proven to be a blessing to humanity in our city."

The Konjola Man is at the Hook Drug Store, Illinois and Washington Sts., Indianapolis, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

LEGION BILL IN HOUSE BOOSTS MEDICAL COST

Report of Director Hines Shows Increase of $160,000,000.

By ROBERT TALLEY

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Free hospitalization and medical treatment for all ex-soldiers, sailors and marines would require $12,577,500 for hospital construction alone, General Frank I. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, reports to Congress, in an analysis of the bill sponsored by the American Legion and other ex-service men's organizations.

The increased cost of hospital maintenance would be $46,960,000 a year for operation, $1,106,000 for clothing, travel and invalids' appliances, and $1,110,000 for out-patient treatment of minor cases.

The bill, drawn in accordance with resolutions adopted at the American Legion's convention in Paris last summer, would extend free medical service to all veterans, regardless of when, where or how the injury or ailment was contracted. Broadly, it covers all cases of all veterans of all wars.

The Veterans' Bureau now has fifty hospitals, containing about 25,000 patients. The $12,577,500 additional construction, it is stated, would be offset to some extent by the taking over of soldiers' homes by the bureau as recommended by the American Legion. These homes are now operated by the War Department.

Another feature of the American Legion's bill, it is estimated, would affect 75,674 veterans and their families and add $4,365,000 a year in disability compensation.

Another change contemplated by the American Legion bill would permit applicants for disability compensation to file their claims at any time. It is estimated this would cost $3,342,516 the first year.
