

REVIVE WOMAN BELIEVED DEAD FOR 24 HOURS

Twitching Muscle Spur to Doctors' Efforts; Identity Is Unknown.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—More than twenty-four hours after being declared dead, an unidentified woman about 30 years old was alive, but still unconscious, at Casualty Hospital here today.

Physicians at 1 a. m. discharged police and fire rescue squads who had worked in relays with a pulmotor to restore her breathing ever since a twitching neck muscle betrayed life in the woman at 8:45 a. m. Wednesday.

Condition Still Grave

The doctors at intervals injected adrenalin and strychnine to hasten recovery of normal pulse and respiration. They reported she was still in a "precarious condition."

The victim, known to them only as "The White Carnation woman," was found unconscious in her pullman berth on a train from New York.

A physician at the Union Station said she had been dead four hours. Nearly three hours later, as she lay on a slab at the city morgue, officials noted the twitching muscle.

Fireman Gives Blood

The pulmotor was brought. At 5 p. m. as warmth again seemed coursing through the stiffened body, fireman D. J. McCarthy gave of his blood in a transfusion operation.

Police trying to establish her identity. The woman was believed identified today as Mrs. Mary True, 30, a widow of Altoona, Md.

Police received word that Sheriff J. C. Griffith of Garrett County, Md., had recognized her description and was on his way to notify her father, Francis Robie of Altoona.

Mrs. True, a widow and nurse, left the Suffolk sanatorium on Long Island, N. Y., last Sunday on a leave of absence for New York, later notifying the institution she would not return.

SEEKS DATA ON CITY MARKETING

Chamber of Commerce Plans Trade Area Survey.

A survey of Indianapolis factories' marketing conditions and needs will be started April 5 by the newly created Chamber of Commerce marketing commission, Clifford L. Harrod, chamber industrial commissioner announced today.

The survey is to be conducted through co-operation of the Indiana University school of commerce and finance, and the Butler university school of business administration.

The survey also will be of assistance in the opening of a branch Department of Commerce office here. Indianapolis heads the list of cities to receive branch offices. The local office is expected to be opened probably Sept. 1. Office space will be donated by the Chamber of Commerce.

The survey will define the present trade area of Indianapolis wholesalers and manufacturers.

REED VISIT IS REFUSED

Keach Turns Down Offer to Sponsor Meeting; Favors Woolen.

Prospect of Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, speaking in Indianapolis April 3, hinged today on Reed's reaction to the refusal of the Marion County Democratic central committee to sponsor the event.

Because of the candidacy of Evans Woolen, Indianapolis banker, "favorite son" of Indiana Democrats for the presidential nomination, LeRoy J. Keach, Democratic county chairman, informed Reed's national headquarters Wednesday that "propriety precludes" the county committee from sponsoring the meeting.

AL SMITH MAY STEP OUT SOON ON TALK TOUR

Hundreds of Invitations Pour Into Albany Urging His Appearance.

NEW YORK, March 22.—A nation-wide audience may soon see Al Smith displaying the stuff that has made him a four-time Governor of New York.

From advisers in all parts of the country the Governor has received suggestions that he make a formal bow to the people West of the Hudson River and below the Mason and Dixon line. Hundreds of invitations have poured into Albany daily from the most amazing variety of conventions, associations and national bodies. They have come from business and professional men, civic groups, political organizations and even sunshine societies.

Turns Down All Invitations

So far he has turned down all invitations, keeping the promise made in his 1927 inaugural address, which was to stick to his knitting as Governor. Both he and his friends argue that a good record at Albany will be his strongest asset when he is placed in nomination at Houston in June.

He will not wage what is known as an aggressive campaign and will make no obvious bid for publicity. He will not even let his name be used in the California primary.

But a new note of warning has been sounded by close advisers returning from the South and West. These assert Smith is now thought of only in terms of wet and dry, Catholic and anti-Catholic, Tammany and anti-Tammany. In many sections of the country, Smith has been told, mention of his candidacy precipitates nothing but discussions revolving around these subjects.

May Speak in May

It has been suggested that an address by Smith on a subject of national or general interest might help to set people thinking of him as a national figure for other and better reasons.

It is understood Smith is giving serious thought to this argument. He will be occupied at Albany until the middle of April with consideration of measures passed before adjournment of the legislature. Then he may be willing to step out of New York.

He has tentatively declined an invitation to address a convention of 3,500 social welfare workers at Memphis on May 8, but in view of his emphasis on the social side of government, some of his advisers feel this meeting would furnish an ideal opportunity for letting the people see and hear him.

POWER PARTY TONIGHT

SECOND DANCE TRIAL TONIGHT

Select Two Couples for Finals at Indiana Ballroom.

The second preliminary of the National Eclectic Dance contest under the auspices of The Indianapolis Times will be held at the Indiana Ballroom tonight.

About 100 couples have entered for the second elimination. Dancers who entered in the first contest last Thursday still are eligible for the other three preliminaries.

Miss Mary Lou Hazelwood and Elton Bronhard and Miss Clarence Panschar and Ernest Wetter were the winners last Thursday and will enter the finals April 12.

Two more couples will be selected Thursday night to enter the finals. The winner of the State contest will be sent to the Trianon ballroom at Chicago April 17-19 with all expenses paid by the Indiana Ballroom to enter the national contest against champions from twenty-nine States.

The purpose of the contest is to discover some new dance to take the place of the Crow Hop and Lindy Glide, etc. Originality, novelty, gracefulness of the dance and other points will be considered by judges.

Two students from Butler University and a representative from The Times will be judges in the second contest.

THIS JAMES E. WATSON SUFFERED MAIL DELAY

Thread Company Representative Changes to "John Henry."

RUSHVILLE, Ind., March 22.—James E. Watson, stopped in Rushville recently, but few persons recognized him. Watson, however, did not happen to be Senator Watson, but James E. Watson, Lowell, Mass., who recently moved to Indianapolis, and who has been having a hard time getting his mail. All mail goes to the Senator.

Watson is a representative of the J. C. Meyer Thread Company. Trips to the general delivery window in Indianapolis failed to yield any mail and the clerks were exceptionally nice.

After Watson failed to get any mail he became suspicious and took the matter up with post officials only to find that the Senator had been receiving all of his mail.

In an effort to untangle the affair Watson is having all his mail sent to him under the name of "John Henry" as his name is James Edward Watson. The Senator's name is James Eli Watson.

Perennials Are Best Source for Cut Flowers

Once Planted They Thrive for Years; Peonies and Annuals Popular.

This is the fifth of a series of spring planting hints with Assistant Park Superintendent George Morgan, appearing in The Times.

"Perennial plants, which die down to the ground every winter, are the best source left of cut flowers," declared Assistant Park Superintendent George Morgan.

"When planted once they will thrive and produce flowers for years. They are best located along the edge of shrubbery border or in the garden. Select a site with good soil which will be exposed to lots of sunlight. Prepare the entire area where the planting is to be done, working into the soil as it is cultivated, a liberal quantity of well rotted manure."

The plants should be arranged according to their heights and color combinations.

Plant Varieties in Groups

Provide enough varieties to produce bloom continuously from spring until fall. Avoid too striking color contrasts. Plant varieties in groups and not singly. Use at least three to five or more of a single variety. A much richer effect is gained in this way.

The average distance of planting is about one foot apart. The taller growing varieties stand farther apart and the dwarfs closer together. Keep the plants well mulched and watered during the summer season.

"In late fall after the plants have died down the ground frozen, cover the beds with leaves or straw. This protects the plants from alternate freezing and thawing, which is very detrimental in that it injures the roots entirely. Fertilize the beds each spring by working well rotted manure or some other good fertilizer in the soil."

Keep beds free from weeds during the entire season. Shasta daisies, peonies and phlox are good examples of perennial flowers.

Plant Peonies in Fall

Since they are so desirable and so many inquiries have been made regarding peonies the following suggestions are given:

To secure the best and largest blooms select a good well-drained soil. Prepare the area to be planted some time in advance, cultivate well to a depth of about eighteen inches to insure the best results. Place five or six inches of well rotted cow manure in the bottom and cover with four or five inches of soil to prevent direct contact with the roots.

Peonies are best planted in September and October, but spring planting is oftentimes done and if so place divisions in the ground in early spring. Plant two or three feet apart and about three inches under the surface.

Peonies are extremely hardy and do not require much protection after the first year. After the plants are established, cultivate each spring to a depth of one or two inches, working into the soil some well-rotted manure and bone meal, being sure that the fertilizer does not come in contact with the crown of the plant.

Peonies throw out a lot of moisture, and after the buds have formed, an application of liquid manure will produce larger and more brilliant blooms. To get the largest flowers, pick off all the lateral buds and permit only the top ones to develop.

Annuals Most Economical

"Every one who has had a garden has grown some of the many varieties of annuals, such as zinnias, asters and sweet peas," said Morgan. "Annuals supply the most economical source of cut flowers. The fact that they die down every fall makes it necessary that they be planted each spring. It is desirable that the beds be renewed each fall by cultivating thoroughly and working in a liberal quantity of well-rotted manure."

"In the spring cultivate the soil and level, removing all heavy clods and any foreign material present. Plant seeds after danger of frost has passed. Sow fine seeds on top of soil and sprinkle lightly with dirt and firm gently."

"Larger seeds should be covered on an average to a depth equal to the width of the seed."

"Sweet peas are planted about one and one-half inches deep and zinnias about one-half inch deep."

"To insure extremely early flowers, seeds may be started indoors and transplanted to the open as soon as the danger of frost is passed. When plants are two or three inches high, thin out to provide a growing space for those that remain. Keep plants well watered throughout season and keep beds free from weeds."

HOOVER MAY BE CALLED BY COAL PROBERS

Witness Says Secretary Regarded Abrogated Pact Binding.

By KENNETH CRAWFORD United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The possibility that Secretary of Commerce Hoover will be asked to testify at the Senate coal investigation was revived today as the Interstate Commerce Committee sought a solution for the economic problems involved in the soft coal strike.

Van A. Bittner, United Mine workers' counsel in West Virginia, testified late Wednesday that Hoover told him in 1926, he considered the Baltimore wage contract, abrogated by several companies, a binding obligation and suggested court action to enforce its terms.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., Charles M. Schwab and R. B. Mellon, all subpoenaed by the committee, are expected to testify, Friday, Governor John Fisher of Pennsylvania probably will testify next week and Hoover may be called later.

Non-resident landlords have a "stranglehold" on the State of West Virginia, Van A. Bittner, United Mine Workers representative, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today.

Bittner read a statement by T. C. Townsend, former West Virginia tax commissioner, attacking the system of "absentee landlordism" said to prevail in the State.

One-half the land in West Virginia is owned by corporations in other States, Townsend's statement said, and the part owned by absentees is worth five times as much as the portion owned by residents, yet residents pay twice as much in taxes as the corporations.

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers interrupted the hearing to ask that counsel for Ohio operators agree to postpone an eviction suit scheduled for hearing in a Federal court at Columbus next Saturday.

William Beldon, counsel for the operators involved, refused to agree to a delay, but after a heated argument with Lewis he promised to communicate with his Ohio clients.

The committee decided in executive session to write another letter to Governor John Fisher of Pennsylvania asking him to testify.
