

DENOMINATION IS DROPPED BY CHURCH'S VOTE

Fairfax Christian Church
Pastor Outlines Stand of Congregation.

Announcement was made today by the Rev. F. W. Sumner, pastor of Fairfax Christian Church, North St. and Berwick Ave., that the congregation has voted unanimously to become nondenominational. A statement of the stand taken is set forth by the pastor as follows:

"We are nondenominational.
We care nothing for ecclesiasticism.

"We seek the good of all and the injury of none.

"Neither do we seek to establish a new sect.

"God has given man superior being, delegating to him divine rights and possibilities, and when he once comprehends the power and resourcefulness of this supreme self within, he will become a new creature.

Truth Is Overlooked

"This truth has been overlooked largely or ignored in the struggle of ecclesiasticism and the contention of materialism.

"We teach nothing that is not already accepted by believers. But ours is a change of emphasis, and that change alters the order of importance of many things previously taught.

"In the main, ours is but a restatement of Christ's teachings from a different point of view, that of spiritual life rather than doctrine. These truths, properly understood, will do more to transform and direct the life than all else.

"God always has endeavored to make man understand that he is a divine being a God in the making.

The Kingdom Within

"This is the 'Kingdom within' the possession and power of divinity. To possess this 'pearl of greatest value' is the most precious acquisition of man.

"Great faith never has been dispensed.

"For membership in our organization we lay down no qualifications nor make any requirements except that through your cooperation you prove yourself worthy of Christian faith and confidence. Our services are simple, but devotional."

City Pauses for Annual Good Friday Observance

Churches of All Creeds Are Filled With Pilgrims as Business Halts.

Christian hosts, in Indianapolis and throughout the State, bowed their heads in meditation and prayer today in remembrance of the crucifixion of Christ.

Churches of the city became shrines for pious pilgrims whose prayers during the traditional Three Hours of Agony, noon until 3 p.m., were offered up from the foot of the cross on Calvary.

Hymns were chanted, psalms read and sermons preached, but for the most part services were of a highly devotional nature, consisting of personal prayer and meditations upon Christ's sacrifice.

Downtown services were held at St. Paul's and Christ Church (Episcopal), Roberts Park M. E. Church, Keith's theater and St. John's Catholic Church.

Most of the neighborhood stores were closing for the three hours as were many factories. Employers in downtown stores and elsewhere permitted their employees to attend services.

More persons observed Good Friday than ever before in the history of the city according to Dr. Ernest N. Evans, executive secretary of the Indianapolis Church Federation. A campaign for greater observance had been carried on by an inter-denominational committee of Protestants and Catholics for several weeks and results were fruitful, Dr. Evans declared.
