

Girl's Anger Aroused When Sorority Sisters Torture Her About Date

BY MARTHA LEE

A YOUNG girl writes me a troubled letter because she is being subjected to that particular form of torture indulged in by the female of the species gone green-eyed.

The whole affair is mixed up with a sorority—as is all-too-frequently the case when one has entered the bonds of sisterhood. It seems that certain of the sisters are jealous of the young man with whom M. L. has been having dates and consequently have resorted to petty slander and the catfish possible behavior.

My advice to any girl in a similar situation is to find out if possible just what has been said and by whom. Then pin the guilty ones down and tell them that they must prove their statements or be exposed to the rest of the organization in their true colors.

Personally, I should value the friendship of one thoroughly nice young man far more than the doubtful devotion of several girls who had shown themselves to be liars and cats.

Sororities as a social pastime are quite all right, but they should not be taken seriously and one's personal happiness and friendships should not be interfered with.

Girls around M. L.'s age are hardly fit to judge other girls fairly and no organization should give them the privilege of so doing.

Please give me advice. There's a nice young man about twenty-five who has been interested in me for a few weeks. He takes me home from sorority meetings and has been very nice to me. I was properly introduced to him by a friend of mine. He also sent me some lovely flowers for Easter, when I was ill. He has been up to the standard in every respect.

Here is my trouble. My sorority sisters are jealous of me. They are not doing it in a joking manner either. They are making it unbearable. Not all of them, however, but just a few who seem to be terribly jealous of something. I can't imagine anyone with any sense acting as they are. It is a few though they can't tell the others finally on their side and that is what I am worried about. They tell things that are not true and the girls who are for me are in doubt. I am president of this sorority and I feel like I must keep up the spirit and good will of these girls and I do like them all. I have forgiven those few girls many times for their slanderous remarks. They won't be in order in the meeting; they say things that hurt, and sometimes they say things that I should resist my office, although I was one of the organizers and did so. I only act in this peculiar manner when they know I am coming after me after meeting and that hurts.

Do you think I should give up this nice friend for these girls that talk so easily? My friend drives a nice car and has his money freely with him. If he is a rich man's son, there is harm in going with him. I have asked mother, as she and I always talk together on such subjects, and she can see no reason why I should give him up for a few girls. I am not understanding. But Martha Lee, it means a great deal to girls around my age to have social activities and it makes one mighty proud to hold office in a sorority. I did give him up for I realize that I am too young to have a car and money. I am eighteen. I then on a good looking, well-to-do fellow to date. I do not want to date a fellow who is hard to find. What shall I do? I am so much for your advice and hoping to see my answer soon as I am sure.

Dear M. L.: You are quite right, nice boys are hard to find. I believe as your mother does—the "social standing" of a fellow is little compared to the strength you would add to your character by standing by a person who has been nice to you. Since you are president why not take the reins in your own hands and see that these girls stop their slander or be expelled from the organization? By no means resign while you feel that you are under a cloud, no matter how small.

National Y. W. President Cites Clear Thinking

Because "no girls have ever shown the straight, clear, constructive thinking that the girls of today are showing," and because they want to lead, Mrs. John M. Hanna of Dallas, Texas, newly-reinstated president of the national Y. W. C. A., warns against a mental standard set up by "we old ones, we reactionists." Although she does not uphold "the tools of the devil," such as lipstick, pocket flasks and short skirts, these items which for so long have provided argumentative fodder for the "clear generation," she is not worried over them, because, she says, "in the first place, I don't believe that they are as prevalent as some seem to think. And, in the second place, they are only the outward expression of the determination for a new freedom."

"And anyway, aren't a good many of the older women doing the same thing?" Mrs. Hanna asks. Cites Sin by Choice Echoing Mrs. Hanna's statements from an English point of view, Maude Royden, one of the principal speakers at the Y. W. C. A. convention in Sacramento, Cal., last week, said:

"The people are not led into the wrong ways of doing because of the influence of the press or of the politics of the 'higher-up.' They are led because they want to be led. No one does wrong unless he wishes. The power to distinguish the false from the true, to be unmoved by base appeals, because you are not base; to love truth because it is the truth; these are the things which go to make up greatness."

A most important work that the future will bring to the "Y," according to Mrs. Hanna, will be the establishment of Y. W. C. A. associations in small communities. The girl in such districts is the one who needs attention now, more than the girl in the city, to whom numerous advantages are open, she believes.

Ask for Organizations
Nor "is such charity limited to home," for requests for Y. W. C. A. associations are coming in from the remote corners of the world. Recent requests for more organizations have come from Cuba, Porto Rico, Liberia, Athens, Korea, Egypt, Jerusalem, Baghdad, Iraq and particularly Harbin, where there are many Russian refugee women. Proper financing and leadership can be obtained such requests cannot be granted.

Indiana delegates to the convention included Mrs. James Lamore, Mrs. Shirley Marsh, Mrs. Sue Meyer, Anderson; Mildred Shoup, Bluffton; Mrs. Esther M. Erickson, Evansville; Mrs. John M. Rogers, Elkhart; Blanche Adams, Laura B. Chandler, Estella Goegline, Miss Ruth Hawkins, Eudora Ratcliffe, Mary Folger, Ruth S. Milligan and Mrs. Fred C. Mills, Indianapolis; Miss Frances Glasgow, Portland; Mrs. Paul Comstock, Miss Winifred A. Wildman, Richmond, and Julia Wood, Lafayette.

BY JULIA BLANSHARD

NEA Service Writer
NEW YORK, April 23.—"Taste begins in the eye" is the expression a famous cooking school teacher once used to impress upon her pupils the necessity of serving attractive meals. Nowadays this truth is more or less recognized. Flowers, candies and ornamental centerpieces adorn tables. Much care is given food for its color value and general appeal as well as its caloric content.

Yet at this time of year too much attention cannot be paid to the attractiveness of breakfast, dinner and supper. Spring and early summer inevitably brings jaded appetites to both children and grown-ups. Instead of administering doses of medicine, why not try stirring sizzling appetites by introducing new and stimulating sets of dishes?

China or Pottery?

The enterprising home-maker this year will find the task of purchasing new dishes a fascinating one. In the first place she has a quite new decision to make. Shall she, for instance, choose china or pottery? Shall it be colorful glassware? Or, perhaps, shall she splurge and buy a pewter set that is so very, very different from the dishes to which the family is accustomed?

All three kinds of dishes are eminently correct. All three have intriguing designs. And a table set in any of the three is bound to be individual, distinctive. For the woman choosing pottery there are new and fascinating designs in the French modernistic sets that are the latest word in tableware. Grey is the basic color—a new table note. There are some off-whites too, such as string, parchment and egg-shell. But the grey is newest, and a touch of platinum coloring for trimming is chic. Original and lively patterns mark these. Scarlet, green, purple or orange, with a line or two of black, play important decorative roles in modern china.

Discussion Topics
Miss Pearl Forsythe will speak on "Various Angles of the Blue Triangle," at the informal meeting of the Y. W. C. A. discussion group of business and professional women Wednesday noon in the green dining room of the "Y." Reservations should be made by 10 a. m. Wednesday at the Y. W. C. A.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR DRAMATIC MUSICALS

"The King's Henchman," a dramatic-musical to be presented by Mrs. Alice Baxter Mitchell and the Orloff Trio, will be given Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. in the ballroom of the Columbia Club.

This is the third annual recital arranged by the Indiana Unit of the Women's Overseas Service League, of which Mrs. Mitchell is president, for the benefit of the Ruth Charlotte Bush fund, in aiding disabled ex-service women of the World War.

Mrs. Mitchell while on the professional stage was well known as the creator of leading roles under the direction of David Belasco, Henry W. Savage and Henry Miller, the last three years of her theatrical career having been spent at the Henry Miller Theater in New York under personal direction of the distinguished producer. During the war she played in France with the "Over There" Theater League before thousands of the doughboys of the A. E. F.

Members of the Indiana unit will usher at the recital, wearing wartime uniforms of the various military and welfare organizations to which they belonged while in service in France, England, Italy and the other allied countries. One of the familiar olive-drab uniforms will be worn by Capt. Violet McAllister of the Salvation Army, who served eighteen months with the 1st Division of the A. E. F.

New Parasols
Checked, polka dotted and figured parasols now come in "individual sizes," that is, they are so small they can shield only one from the sun or rain.
