GROWS FROM STRIKE

Workers' Chiefs Deny Men
Will Go Back to Work for Low Pay.

Headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America here today was deeply interested in the attempt of an Indiana coal operator through an Indianapolis court order to put into effect a $5 a day minimum wage scale in his mines in Knox County.

The miner headquarters predicted that the union men would not go back to work for such wages; that as long as they molested nobody no court could force them to go into a mine for $5 a day. This is $2.50 a day less than the famous Jacksonville agreement scale, to maintain which miners now are on strike.

The mines are the three in Knox County of the Knox Consolidated Coal Company, with headquarters in Indianapolis. The mines have been closed since the strike began, months ago, operators contending they could not make a profit and pay the Jacksonville scale.

Last week a suit for receiver of the Knox Consolidated concern was filed before Superior Judge Linn D. Hay here. Edwin D. Logsdon, president, was named receiver. The next heard from the suit was the issuance of an order which is regarded by the miners as remarkable.

The order fixes the minimum amount of wages to be paid persons working inside the mine at $5 a day, and sets the specific amounts to be paid all the various classes of labor in and outside the mine, ranging from $2.65 a day for trappers to $160 a month for first engineer. The same order includes an injunction prohibiting any person without business upon the grounds from entering the property. Logsdon today declared that some men had gone back to work in one of the mines at the reduced wage scales.

United Press dispatches from Vincennes told a different story. Descriptions of activity around the mines showed that a workmen merely were cleaning out the workings, as always is necessary after a long shut-down.

Logsdon said that general operation would be started as soon as the cleanup is finished and new machinery installed. Meanwhile, Harvey Cartwright, president of District 11 of the U. M. W. A., declared that union miners would not return to work at the Knox mines at such a figure.

'Shepherd's' Shepherd Dog Blue Eyed

The "Shepherd's" Shepherd is what the Rev. James L. Carrio, St. John's Catholic Church pastor, Osgood, Ind., calls this blue-eyed Australian shepherd that has traveled with him thousands of miles. Through the combined efforts of priest and dog hundreds of dollars have been raised for church purposes both at Osgood and in Oregon, his former pastorate. The picture was taken when Father Carrio visited the city hall here to talk about park improvement. He is a member of the park committee in his home town.

By United Press
MIAMI, Fla., May 2.—Judge Clyde I. Webster, Moslem Temple, Detroit, today was elected imperial outer guard of the Mystic Shrine, an honor carrying with it ultimate election as imperial potentate of the Ancient Arabic Order.

Frank C. Jones of Arabian Temple, Houston, Texas, was named imperial potentate. He succeeds Clarence M. Dunbar, Providence, R. I. LOS ANGELES was chosen as the 1929 convention city. Time of next year's convention was not decided, but it is expected to be the latter part of May.

The 100,000 nobles, their wives and friends, who attended the imperial potentate's ball Tuesday night, as well as street dancing, which drew additional thousands, were to enjoy excursions and seaside recreations today. The Shrine Musical Directors' Association also will meet.

Murat Temple Parades

By United Press
MIAMI, Fla., May 2.—Murat Temple's uniformed ranks created a stir and much applause from more than 150,000 spectators who witnessed the great Shrine parade here Tuesday. The huge procession took more than three hours to pass.

Led by Potomac William Bockstahler, the Indianapolis units were as outstanding as any in the colorful pageantry. The big Murat band included "Doc" Hurst playing the largest tuba in the world, an $8,500 instrument loaned from a band instrument display here.

Rumor that a terrific cyclone had swept Indianapolis caused considerable anxiety among the Hoosiers here Monday night. It was bantered about the hotel lobbies and many inquiries were made to newspapers.

James A. Allison of Miami Beach, former Indianapolis resident and member of Murat Temple, sent flowers and fruit to each Shriner and guests from Indiana at the hotel.

Another touch of the home town was furnished by the papers here carrying advertisements from L. Strauss & Co., with their famous slogan, "Strauss Says." The layout contained a drawing of the Monument surmounted with a fez and other Shrine insignia.

NATION VIEWS WATSON DRIVE AS AUDACIOUS

Corruption So Far Bared Is Sign of More Hidden,
Says Author.

This is the second of a series of three articles by Will Irwin, famous author, under the general heading, "Indiana, Be Yourself."

BY WILL IRWIN

No political expert, glancing over the bare facts of Indiana's history during the past five or six years, could fail to see the symptoms of a corrupt machine pulling the strings. One community sends its mayor to jail for taking his 5 per cent out of the fake prize fight swindle—a form of the confidence game so open and flagrant as to be comic to all but the victims. The same community rises up and brings impeachment proceedings against its judge.

A Governor is indicted, along with the engineer of the machine in the capital and metropolis, on the charge of offering former Governor a bribe of $10,000 and a promise of immunity from prosecution. Arraigned, the Governor and afterward his assistant in the deal, escape the legal process through which candid men vindicate themselves—by pleading a technicality in the statute of limitations. The Governor retains his office, the county boss his position in the State organization.

Next, the State chairman is sent to a Federal prison for bank crimes. The mayor of the metropolis loses his office for flagrant violation of the election law.

All Truth

Every one who understands politics knows that when such sporadic instances show on the surface there is much more beneath; that for every proved and certain instance of favoring a bank, bribing an official, there are a score of hidden instances known only to the insiders. The men who have gone before the grand jury are merely the careless or reckless or unlucky. The situation was here before Stephenson began his singular operation. Indeed, he probably took this into account when, with the whole country to choose from, he lit on Indiana. A kind of diabolical Napoleon, he was looking not for money alone, but for power.

Being a super-salesman, and having a line of goods very popular with one element in all our States, he could get the money almost anywhere. But to get the power he needed a corruptible officials who were cogs in a good, tight machine. Only in such a State could he make effective use of bribery and intimidation, could he pledge candidates in writing to serve a power above the law.

Things May Grow Worse

Stephenson passed to the obscurity of his cell, but the machine remained. Indiana had missed its widest opportunity. It cannot last of course. It may be good for this election. In which case, the machine in the end will utterly be smashed by such a sensational, expensive and explosive election as has just occurred in Illinois.

Only if Indiana does not take the bull by the horns this time, if she waits for an occasion of action in an offense against the civic law as open and flagrant as Stephenson's against the moral law, things will grow much worse before they grow better.

In this scheme of politics, the senior Senator from Indiana occupies a position high and unique.

The address approved of the League of Nations and World Court. The movement to coordinate all the religious forces of the world in the interest of world peace, unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and of the plan to give certain foreign countries greater autonomy in the matter of selecting native bishops and church administration.

The address pleaded for fostering of international and interracial good will.

The World Court and the League of Nations, it continued, embody practical steps in the direction of world peace, but for the United States to refuse her wholehearted participation "is utterly inconsistent with its protestation of friendliness with other nations."

2 BURGLARS SLUG AND ROB CITY MAN

Apparently slugged by burglars he surprised preparing to break into his home shortly before midnight, Wilbur Anderson, 21, of 822 Laurel St., remained unconscious by the side of the house until he was discovered by his mother at 4 a. m. today.

His mother, Mrs. Della Davis, alarmed at his failure to return home had started a search for him and saw him through a smashed window, lying on the ground.

According to Sergt. Frank Reilly, in charge of the police emergency squad, Anderson was clutching $5.30 in his hand.

The remainder of his pay, $31.30, had been taken from him, he said. Anderson had been attending a banquet of Indianapolis Water Company employees, he said.

Returning about midnight he saw a man peering into a side window of the front room of the house and walked up to him and inquired what he was doing.

Another man who had been standing behind a nearby pole stepped up and struck him on the head with a brick, Anderson said. That was the last he remembered.

When Pain Comes

Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion, very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard of physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875—Advertisement.
