

Well Conditioned Body
Best Spring Fever Cure
and Good Disposition Aid

BY MARTHA LEE

WITH the advent of spring weather comes a volley of letters from young girls who wish to make themselves attractive and likable for the men whose fancy turns to them. And then there are letters from girls who want new spring clothes to keep pace with their sisters in work who can afford new outfits.

My advice to all these girls is not to despair, because you haven't so many clothes as some others, is to keep what you have immaculately clean and well pressed this nice warm weather. And about the boys, the ones you are most interested in—be sociable and sweet and charming to them; don't be languid with spring fever as so many are wont to do.

Now is the time to be careful of your diet and be sure that your system is in good shape. Take plenty of exercise, not too strenuous. Take sensible care of your skin. Give it protection from the sun and wind if you are to be out for any length of time.

By keeping your body in good condition you can keep your mind free from worry and your disposition happy.

Dear Miss Lee: My boy friend is 19, we both go to high school together and have been going with each other for three years. The last few months he seems as if we can't get along. If he can't have his own way he gets angry and won't give in. It's his fault or mine. I always have a struggle between me and him. I wrote a letter for him and because I tore it up and didn't give it to him he got mad. I love him and he says he loves me, so I don't want to break up. Please tell me what I should do.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO.
Dear Don't Know What to Do: It seems to me that both you and the "boy friend" would be better off if you would spend some of your time having other dates. You are both decidedly too young to know whether or not you're in love and to be devoting all your attention to each other—as a matter of fact, you're doubtless getting on each others' nerves. I think your viewpoint would be entirely changed if you would see as little as possible of each other for the next few months.

MARYE and 'MOM' THEIR LETTERS

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Mom, darling:
I guess you're right. Thinking it over I decided that maybe Pete might misunderstand me and think that I don't love my husband. So I gave him the air. But don't think it didn't cost me a pang or two to do it. I didn't lose my eyesight when I got married, you know, or forgot how nice it is to know that somebody's all agog over me.

I certainly hope I can live to see the day when marriage won't be such a damper. Just why should the mere fact that I'm married make any difference in my relations with other men is a mystery to me. I never expected to marry every man I ever went with. So I can't see why my marriage should matter any more to the men I know than the women. Except if one of them should want to make me his wife.

Some day no one will care whether you're married or not until it comes to the point where they inquire before proposing. Just like asking a friend if she's got a date for Thursday night. Marriages aren't any more important than that to those not involved.

The idea that a woman ceases to exist as an individual and becomes a couple as soon as she takes the marriage vow gives me a pain. Marriage is all right, if kept in its place. And it's place certainly is in the home. I still enjoy dancing and palling around with some one who knows something to talk about outside of the three dreadful "D's." Dress, disease and domesticity. Women soon get to be awfully dull if they drop their men friends.

But your telling me what you did about the South Americans spoiled my fun with Pete. I don't think him to think Alan's a sap husband. I'm fond of the old kid even if he is a handicap in the pleasure future.

So I told Pete I was afraid he would get a false impression of American women if I went around with him any more and so we'd have to sing our friendship to sleep. He seemed to think I was holding something back. Maybe I didn't like his company? What a joke that is. If there's any girl with soul so dead she won't thrill to melting eyes and a Spanish voice she's not walking around in my figure.

Your heartbroken but noble, MARYE.

MRS. HERBERT HOOVER VIEWED BY FELLOW CABINET WIFE

Mrs. Herbert Hoover

Editor's Note—Mrs. William M. Jardine, wife of the United States Secretary of Agriculture, gives in this article some interesting impressions of Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the United States Secretary of Commerce.

BY MRS. WILLIAM M. JARDINE

Wife of the United States Secretary of Agriculture.

Most people I meet are indoor people. They would rather be in a house, eating or talking or dancing or playing bridge, than working or camping or walking, or doing anything else out-of-doors.

Of course, one gets used to this, but I for one have never got over my love for the outdoors, which goes back to my childhood in the Far West. And so I feel a sense of comradeship with outdoor people.

And Mrs. Herbert Hoover is, first and foremost, an outdoor person—and a very healthy, wholesome, comradely one.

Her Garden—a Woodsy Place

You are more likely to find her out-of-doors than anywhere else. She may be in her garden, which is a woody place with big trees, quite different from the fashionable terraced lawns of the neighborhood.

Mrs. Hoover likes everything that goes with living outdoors. Indeed, she never sleeps under a roof if she can be out.

Home of Comfort

She has made her home one of the most comfortable places I know. It isn't a show place or an art collector's gallery; it is just a home—the sort of home that you instinctively feel is just right for young people.

The Hoovers have two fine sons. They aren't at home now, but there are almost always young people in the house. And there are older people—people of all sorts, because the Hoovers are interested in men and women who are doing things, regardless of wealth or position or anything of that sort.

Mrs. Hoover's interests and point of view, it seems to me, must go back to her pioneer experiences.

Like her husband, she was born in Iowa, but when she was very young her parents moved to California and settled in Monterey, the old Spanish capital. Here Mrs. Hoover—then Lou Henry—grew up.

She Liked Exploring

This was still a sparsely settled region, rich in stories of the days of '49 and the even earlier days of the Spanish occupation. The Henrys were full of the pioneer spirit, and at the same time they were interested thoroughly in home and community life. Lou and her younger sister Jean grew up in a household in which work, recreation and civic spirit were happily blended.

Mrs. William M. Jardine

In her play time Lou spent hours in the saddle, exploring the whole of the splendid countryside about Monterey. When she went to Stanford University, she continued to ride and explore whenever she could.

After her college course she went back home and spent a year of apprenticeship in her father's bank. "After that," she comments laughingly, "I knew I was worth at least $150 a month."

Then came her marriage to Mr. Hoover, whom she had met at Stanford. There followed years of real pioneering—not only the building up of mining enterprises, but establishing communities and home life about the mines. She always took an active part in the latter. She insisted then, as she does now, that everybody is entitled to a comfortable home.

When you talk with her today, you can't help sensing in her the pioneer spirit. She has courage, ability, resourcefulness—those qualities that made the pioneers. She has, too, their real affection for people, and their sense of humor.

Mrs. I. E. Rush was chosen a delegate to the General Federation of Clubs in San Antonio, Texas, in June. Mrs. Harry Stinger sang two numbers and Mrs. L. E. York and Mrs. Mae Brown, county director of medical contests, gave readings. Mrs. Fred Miller pinned the white ribbon on the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Jay. Mrs. J. W. House was in charge of devotions. Mrs. Nellie Springer was in charge of the luncheon. Eight new members were added to the roll.
