MARYE and 'MOM'

THEIR LETTERS

My Darling Child:

What an extremist you are, my dear. And how wise you are one minute, and how foolish the next!

Where did you get the idea that I advised you to do what you did? And couldn't you be romantic without calling in the scene shifters and stage hands, and creating the atmosphere of a society drama?

You see, my dear, romance to you is really external—it's apple blossoms, and shaded lights, and trappings—not something that is in you, and that you must naturally radiate. That is why you can see no romance in Alan—just because it is not trimmed up in tinsel. You fail to see anything romantic in a man loving you and expressing his love in practical tributes such as a lovely home, quite unlimited charge accounts, pretty dresses, and more liberty than any girl as attractive as you should have.

If you ever had worked, you would know that all work does not end by 5 o'clock, even if that happens to be the end of the eight-hour day.

As nearly as I can figure it out, you immediately suspected that Alan was giving his work as an excuse for being with his stenographer. I'm ashamed of you. Certainly, you have nothing to prove it, or had nothing, when you wrote to me.

You just planned a certain evening—probably because of the novelty of it—and when it did not work out as you wanted it to, you let it defeat the object. That is most illogical and unreasonable.

And certainly Alan had some reason for being angry at you. It wasn't exactly the sort of homecoming a man who had been working all day and all evening would relish. I think you owed him an explanation. And certainly, I think you were much to blame in having Norman at your home, at that hour, with no one else around. Yes, I'm old-fashioned, Marye.

I think the whole affair would have been quite laughable, if it had not been for your remark, "We haven't spoken since." I felt badly over that. To this sort of armed neutrality, I much prefer a good, all-around fight, where each of you can come out straight from the shoulder and thrash out your differences.

My advice, my dear child, is to tell your husband exactly what happened—and just how Norman happened to be there. Don't apologize or be humble; just be sensible. Don't dramatize the situation. I believe you could forget your bitterness in a good hearty laugh. Try it.

Your devoted,

MOM.

Life's Niceties

Hints on Etiquette

1. Should one allow her children to attend parties at homes where she does not know the hostess?
2. When is it all right?
3. Should the children write their own acceptance?

The Answers

1. It never used to be done but now it is better not to stand on ceremony always.
2. When the party is for school friends or children met at other parties that were all right.
3. Yes.

CARD PARTIES

Patriotic Order of America Camp 4 will give a card party in Castle Hall, 230 E. Ohio St., Monday at 2:30 p. m. daylight time.

WEDDING GOWN STYLES OF LAST 22 YEARS

THE evolution of June's most popular item of wearing apparel—the bridal gown—is pictured here.

In 1906, Alice Roosevelt wore a princess gown with old-fashioned lace bertha, ruffled short sleeves, no cap, long gloves, veil caught with orange blossoms atop her pompadour.

Cecily Smyth-Piggott wore a fringed overskirt with sheath slip, collarless neckline, an umbrella-like veil, and court train. She carried lilies. This was in 1910.

Adelina Merz wore a low neck brocaded gown with rose point bertha, lace cap with tulle veil attached, and carried a shower bouquet in 1912.

In 1920, Leslie Murray wore a short, draped-lace gown with no train, and a severe tulle cap with orange blossoms over the ear. An ermine stole was added to her costume as she left the church.

Gwendolyn Talbot, in 1928, wore a gown of satin and old lace, with Vionnet neck, long sleeves, long train from shoulders, tulle cap veil, lace cap and orange blossom bows on the slippers. Her bouquet was of gardenias, lilies of the valley and orchids.

Family Menus

BY SISTER MARY

BREAKFAST—Stewed figs, cereal, cream, pineapple, omelet, rice pudding, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Stuffed baked potatoes, creamed carrots, bread, cottage pudding with strawberry sauce, milk, tea.

DINNER—Casserole of mutton, boiled new potatoes, diced turnips in cream sauce, rhubarb shortcake, milk, coffee.

Cottage Pudding

Three tablespoons butter, three-fourths cup sugar, one egg, one-half cup hot water, one and one-quarter cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon vanilla, one-eighth teaspoon salt.

Cream butter and gradually beat in sugar. Add egg well beaten. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt and add to first mixture. Add hot water and beat until batter is perfectly smooth. Add vanilla and pour into an oiled and floured shallow pan. Bake twenty-five minutes in a moderately hot oven. Cut in squares and serve warm with the following sauce:

Strawberry Sauce

Four tablespoons butter, three-fourths cup powdered sugar, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla, one cup crushed strawberries, one-half cup whipping cream.

Cream butter and gradually beat in sugar which has been sifted. Beat until creamy. Beat in vanilla and strawberries. Fold in cream whipped until firm and serve at once.

This is another excellent way to use strawberries before they become plentiful.

SORORITY MEETINGS

Kappa Chi Theta will be entertained by Miss Margaret Vaughan, 18 N. Holmes Ave., Friday evening.

Barnhart-Butler

The marriage of Miss Martha Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Butler, R. R. C. and Ralph Barnhart took place Saturday at the Mt. Olivet Methodist Church, Ben Davis.

FEDERATION OF MUSIC NEWS

One of the great helps offered Indiana musicians by the Indiana Federation of Music Clubs is its library extension department which is under the State chairmanship of Mrs. D. D. Nye, Bloomington.

The library has submitted a list of chamber music, opera and organ music which it has ordered for public use. The music may be borrowed for thirty days outside Marion County. Applications should be made through local libraries where they exist. If there is no local library, application may be made to the State library direct. No charge is made other than for transportation.

In addition, Mrs. Nye is making a collection of old folk tunes. There are many of these scattered over the country, brought from European countries and many sung for centuries. Some tunes, especially old fiddle dance tunes are pure American, such as "Old Zip Coon," "Arkansas Traveler," and "Soapsuds Over the Fence."

There are several different groups of folk tunes, ballads, love songs, game songs, animal songs and fiddle dance tunes, such as "Barbara Allen," "The Rosewood Casket," "London Bridge," "Frog Went A-Courting," and "Speed the Plow."

Mrs. Nye would be glad to have other tunes of this type for her collection. Any one knowing such, write Mrs. D. D. Nye, 420 E. Sixth St., Bloomington, giving name of tune or song and the name and address of singer or player.

Wrecking of Homes Laid to Mothers

BY MARTHA LEE

An Organization for the Suppression of Mothers-in-Law is needed in Indianapolis.

Out of the thousands of letters I receive every year, a fair percentage of them are complaints about mothers-in-laws.

That's pretty bad. I can't understand why mothers don't see the thing in the right way and stop hounding their children-in-law.

First it is a young wife complaining that her husband's mother has moved in on them, taking their home. "It is her home now," the bride wails.

And then it is the husband shouting that his wife's mother has started heckling him. "She says I don't treat my wife as I should," complains the husband.

So it goes, year in and year out. Mothers know they are unwelcome, but still they keep right on visiting their children.

But sometimes the visit becomes permanent. "I've decided to visit you this summer," mother writes to her son.

Fails to Understand
And then she doesn't understand when she receives no reply to her letter, or why the reply is so cold. "I'll bet his wife had something to do with this," says the mother between clenched teeth.

Sure the wife did, and I don't blame her, either. Here is something for all girls to remember. If you are not married now you will be, and then you will have a mother-in-law.

With love you don't have to suffer. But aside from that, you will have your husband and your home and all the other things that go to make up life.

You live your life as you want it without interference from any outsider. That is, if you are lucky. Then you will have children. Soon they will be grown, and they will establish homes of their own.

Right to Own Lives
They were not consulted when they were brought into this world, and you owe it to them to let them live their own lives.

Don't try to tell them what to do and how to do it. Let them do it for themselves.

Certainly they are glad to have you visit them once in a while. But make it short. Don't stay forever.

Live such a life in relation to your children-in-law that when you go to visit them they will tell the neighbors: "Mother is coming to visit us next week," and not, "Well, the mother-in-law will descend next week!"

Here is a letter that is typical of the hundreds received at this desk: "Dear Martha Lee: I have been taught all my life that a man's greatest love goes to his mother, but now I know that his greatest love goes to his wife."

My brother gave his greatest love to mother and most of his salary. Mother earned quite a bit of money, but she spent all of it.

Brother lost his wife because he had to give everything to mother. His wife is married to another man. She seems to be happy with her second husband. Brother couldn't give her happiness because mother took everything.

Brother never comes to see mother any more and he doesn't let her see him. Mother lives with my wife and me now and she is very unhappy. Mother is jealous of my wife.

Mother gets all the money and fine clothes, while my wife has to dress cheaply. Mother handles most of my money and runs my home. She believes that my wife should work because she is young.

When I do the dishes and wash I don't know any more since my wife came between us. I would like to take my wife in my arms when I come home from work, but if I did mother would say I was a baby.

Mother says I should never marry when I have her to support. I have her to support. I have her to support. I have her to support.

My wife doesn't say much, but many nights she cries herself to sleep on my shoulder.

Well, yes, I'm afraid I'll lose my wife like brother did. Sometimes I almost hate mother because she is so jealous.

Mother is 46 years old and is able to work. She could let mother live with some of her relatives, but she won't leave the house.

My wife says this is her home and does not belong to my mother. She says a mother should never live with her children.

Evidently you have reached the end of the rope. It seems assured that before long you will lose your wife or your mother.

It is up to you to choose between them. If you want your wife, then be firm with your mother. Tell her to leave your home and establish a home of her own.

You can provide for her in some other place, and it will leave you to your happiness.

If your mother doesn't acquiesce to polite demands, I suggest you consult a lawyer.
