Brule River Paradise for Anglers Teems With Finny Beauties.

SUPERIOR, Wis., June 7.—When President Coolidge decided to spend his summer's vacation on the Cedar Island estate of the late Henry Clay Pierce, he selected the very headquarters of the army of North American trout.

If it's fishing the President wants—and, judging from his enjoyment of the sport on previous vacations, it is—he could not have picked a better spot.

The cold waters of Brule River hold the great-granddaddies of all the gamey trout that ever gladdened a fisherman's heart.

Native Guides Eager

One of the men who eagerly is awaiting the President's arrival is George Babb, the champion fisherman of the country. He knows every foot of the Brule River bottom and is planning to offer his services to the President as a guide.

Another is Antoine Dennis, 76-year-old boatman, who probably will be chosen to take the President up and down the stream in his rowboat.

Fishermen here are eager to see that President Coolidge can do with the Brule trout. Without guides, they say, it would be a sure bet that he would go empty-handed, for the trout in the Brule know the angler's tricks from of old and are wary.

With Babb and Dennis to steer him around, however, President Coolidge should be able to make some splendid catches.

The basic situation of the Brule is composed of the ordinary brook or speckled trout. In addition, however, there is a wealth of brown trout, a good number of steelheads and a fair number of rainbows.

Ten Pounds Common

The rainbows grow the largest, ten-pound specimens being not uncommon; but local fishermen say most of this species have probably left the river for Lake Superior by this time.

It is partly because the late Mr. Pierce was a fishing enthusiast that trout are so abundant in the waters of his estate.

When he built his summer home here he found brook and brown trout in abundance, but no steelheads or rainbows.

These fish are natives of the Rocky Mountains and Pacific Coast streams. So Mr. Pierce proceeded to stock the stream with them, and the supply has been increasing ever since.

AILING YOUTHS TO BE 'AIR-MINDED'

A Very Wonderful Book Is Now Ready for All Boys Who Are Interested in Building and Flying Model Aircraft at Home.

By WALTER D. HICKMAN

EVERY day I seem to realize more than ever the advantages that boys of today have.

I have before me a grand and glorious book for boys who are interested in building and flying model aircraft.

This official book of the Playground and Recreation Association of America is called "Building and Flying Model Aircraft" and it is published by The Ronald Press Company of New York.

It is by Paul Edward Garber and C. DeP. Chandler is editor. Orville Wright is chairman of the National Playground Miniature Aircraft Tournament Committee and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is associate chairman.

Col. Lindbergh in the space allotted to him in the foreword of this book, writes: "The Playground and Recreation Association is greatly assisting in the advancement of aeronautics by enlisting thousands of boys in American cities in the National Playground Miniature Aircraft contest. As flying activities increase a basic education in elementary aviation is becoming a necessity for everyone."

This book tells you how to make the following: The Jack Lefker 1927 prize winning model; model aircraft propellers, the sizzle-boat, the monowing, the humming bird, the Lange-3 model, chassis models, scale models, model balloon, gliders and the like.

The author in the chapter dealing with the uses of model aircraft writes: "In addition to the value as a recreation model aeronautics plays a prominent part in the industrial and commercial development of the world. One who adopts model building and flying is fitting himself in a very enjoyable way for part in life."

This book also goes into detail explaining how numerous model aircraft contests may be conducted. It seems to me that such contests here would be wonderful for boys and girls in the city parks.

I recommend "Building and Flying Model Aircraft." It is the most complete book of its kind that I have ever seen.

LOOKING OVER

NEW SHOW AT OHIO

"Abe's Irish Rose" seems to be the starting point of all these Irish-Jewish plays. At that the well-known play did nothing but set forth what was an old, old, idea. "Clancy's Kosher Wedding" is another of these light and amusing things in which the boy is one nationality and the girl another, and on their marriage bring together the two families.

George Sidney

Heymen Cohen and Timothy Clancey both had clothing stores on Delaney St., next door to each other. And they lived across the hall from each other over their stores. Heymen and Timothy spent their spare time fighting with each other and their wives were continually pulling them apart, but the wives were friendly.

Leah was the daughter of the Cohen's and the Clancey's had a son Tom, who was on the fire department. And the son and daughter were much in love with each other. The shadow in their sunlight was one Izzy Duffy who was a prize fighter.

Izzy and Tom got into a fight at the Irish-Jewish picnic and finished it at the boxing club. Heymen bets his store against that of Clancey's and loses. He has to move and Clancey misses him and brings him back.

It is light, it is entertaining, and there are some good laughs in it when Mose Cohen sings an Irish song at the picnic and starts the fight.

The part of Cohen is taken by George Sidney. He is mighty good. Will Armstrong is Clancey. He has a good character part here and makes a lot of it. Rex Leas is the son Tom. He is fair. Leah is played by Ann Brody. A good part and well done.

A serial picture, "The King of the Jungle," is also on the programs, as well as shorter subjects.

At the Ohio today and tomorrow. (By the Observer.)

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I really can't express in writing how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. After my second baby was born I was always tired. I read so much of what the Vegetable Compound has done for others that I gave it a trial. It has certainly done wonders for me. I have praised it to single and to married women and intend to continue it. It seems that taking your medicine has made me a different girl. I also secured Lydia E. SIMPLIFY RULES FOR EMIGRANTS

Single Card Needed for Trip to Mexico.

By United Press

MEXICO CITY, June 7.—Tourists entering Mexico may do so with a minimum of discomfort with respect to immigration and passport requirements.

The new regulations for tourists simplify the rules to such an extent that in the future it will be possible for an entire family to cross the border with only one identification card for all.

The only proof of identity now required is the identification card provided by the Mexican consular officers in the United States. This is a card containing a full-face and profile photograph of the bearer.

One is asked also to state whether the visit is exclusively one of recreation. A tourist is permitted to remain in Mexico six months. If for any reason it is discovered that the object of the visit is for material or reasons other than recreation, the applicant is subject to the general regulations of an immigrant including the payment of the $11 tax.
