

TIM MURPHY'S DEATH LAID TO 'RACKET' RIVALS

Slain Gang Lord Had Tried to Usurp Czar Powers, Say Police.

CHICAGO, June 28.—A ring of powerful racketeer kings, whose place Big Tim Murphy had tried to usurp, were accused by Deputy Police Commissioner O'Connor today as the killers of the Chicago labor leader.

Ten of them, who dominate the cleaning and dyeing industry in Chicago, and whose immense profits have been the envy of rival racketeers, were sought by police. Commissioner O'Connor announced he believed the murder had been solved.

Big Tim, who was shot to death in front of his home Tuesday night, has been connected definitely with a coup to overthrow the ten leaders, it was said.

Two of the ten, Frank Noonan and James Forsyth, will be booked for murder as soon as they are found, the commissioner asserted, and similar charges will be placed against John Hand, arrested yesterday, and a fourth man, name not revealed.

Hand, a close friend of Noonan and Forsyth, admitted having a revolver in his room which had been fired a short time before his arrest.

When A Girl Loves

THIS HAS HAPPENED VIRGINIA BREWSTER is in love with NATHANIEL DANN, but she is tricked into promising to marry FREDERICK DEAN in one year if she fails to earn $100,000 that he alleges her father cheated him out of. BREWSTER had lost his fortune before his death and VIRGINIA is left alone.

CHAPTER XLV TEN minutes after Virginia entered "Oddly" Leigh's sickroom she had buried her hopes forever. He did not come directly that he was a ruined man but it was apparent in everything she saw and in what he left unsaid.

He had heard of her father's death. Virginia, sitting in a chair drawn close to his bedside, saw a flicker of pain pass over his face as he mentioned Richard Brewster's name.

Finally he asked Virginia who had come out to the plantation with her. She rather sought to evade answering him.

"I'm afraid our reception of visitors doesn't do us much credit," he said with a smile that wrung Virginia's heart. "The overseer is away. His wife was my housekeeper. I haven't been able to get down for a few days to see what old Rastus is doing."

Virginia was not taken in by his reference to his illness as a short one. It would have been evident to anyone that he had not been out of his bed for much longer than a few days.

craps than to do his duty. I fear." Virginia could not bear to have him think her a snob. She leaned forward and placed a hand on his. "Please don't misunderstand me," she said softly. "I must get back to the ship because I am the hostess engaged by the line to turn the Agena into a floating home where the passengers are all guests."

Leigh was amazed. "Why in the world are you doing that?" he exclaimed. Virginia swallowed hard, and told him a beautiful lie. "Don't you know that most of the girls in my set are going in for self-expression?" she asked. "I thought it would be worth while to do something useful, and besides, coming down here afforded me an opportunity to meet you. Father used to talk about you a great deal. I know that you saved his life," she added simply.

He placed a hand over hers, pressed it tenderly. Virginia felt his eyes searching through hers, weighing her, but she felt safe because there were some things she did not know about "Oddly."

One of these was his ability to read through the eyes. It might have been a natural gift but it so it had been developed to a higher degree during the years he had spent as a big game hunter in the jungles.

He had learned to know what a beast meant to do in the same fraction of time required to send the order for action from the mind of the animal to its muscles. He needed only a glance at its eyes.

He knew also that when a woman lied, for good or evil, wild asses could not drag the truth from her if she really did not wish to tell it. So he asked no questions of Virginia.

sacrifice of time had been in vain. Future. She was no nearer her goal than when she started. And there was the remainder of the cruise to be endured, while back in New York Nathaniel . . .

No, she dared not let her mind dwell on what might be transpiring there. She'd go mad if she let herself think of Nathaniel turning to Chiri for comfort.

Presently Rastus came with a cane table and then returned to the house looking very refreshing in the tall glasses with slices of lime and orange. But it was not cold. It was, in fact, tepid.

"The ice machine done broke itself this mornin'," he apologized. Miss Webster rattled on with her "I told you so's," while Virginia slipped from her glass in silence.

Just before they were leaving she asked Rastus about his master. "E'ow long has he been ill?" "I dunno, Missy. He ain't been out o' bed for mos' sev'l weeks. I've 'fraid he ain't goin' to get well; he's a broke man."

"Can't you persuade him to call a doctor?" "Ain't no doctor goin' bring him back what he los'."

Virginia had told him enough of the visit to explain why it upset her so. She tried to make up for her neglect by sending out boxes of delicacies, some of which she bought from the ship's stores, books and magazines the passengers had discarded, and little notes of cheer.

In return Mr. Leigh sent her gorgeous flowers, mostly roses, but now and then a potted poinsettia plant, with blooms more than a foot in diameter.

For the Agena left Port au Prince Virginia received a letter from Nathaniel. It had arrived on a mail boat that had not stopped long in Havana, but she knew it must have been written within a few days after she left New York.

Time enough, however, for Niel to wait calmly. Virginia tore open the envelope with eager, trembling fingers.

They say that if your wife is partial to red trimmed in gold it would be suicidal to put her into a kitchen decorated in sky-blue trimmed with white.

For the sake of marital happiness they recommend that every husband provide the madam with decorations and utensils to suit her color complex.

W. J. Peterson, Nashville, Tenn., filed a suit for $5,000 Wednesday in Circuit court because he missed a train. The suit alleges that Peterson was traveling from Nashville to Indianapolis via Terre Haute, Ind., where he was to have changed trains. The conductor failed to notify him of the change and he rode past Terre Haute, missing his connection for Indianapolis, he says.

An important business appointment could not be kept because of the conductor's error, the suit alleges. Defendants in the suit are the L. & N. C. I. & E. and the Pennsylvania railroad.

BANK TO OPEN DOORS MONDAY

Citizens State at Noblesville Reorganized.

By United Press NOBLESVILLE, Ind., June 28.—Creditors and employees of the city of Noblesville rejoiced today over announcement that the Citizens State Bank closed last Friday will re-open Monday. The city was a depositor in the bank, and although $3,000 in bills have been allowed by the city council since the closing, creditors and employees were unable to collect.

Closing of the bank followed taking of $147,000 of its funds by Omar Patterson, for twenty-eight years in its employ as a bookkeeper, who committed suicide on discovery of the shortage.

Bank officials announce a 35 percent over-subscription of the bank's $100,000 capital under reorganization and that $20,000 life insurance and all real and personal property of Patterson has been turned over to the bank by his heirs.
