

BRITISH TRAINS CRASH HEAD-ON; 22 KNOWN DEAD

Wreck Worst in Years in England; Many Trapped in Cars.

By United Press
DARLINGTON, England, June 28.—A swiftly moving excursion train, carrying 200 passengers, many of them women, collided head-on early today with a freight train at the South Darlington station and the death toll thus far is twenty-two.

Five of those killed were women and there were forty persons in hospitals, some in very serious condition.

Impact of the trains was terrific. One witness said that the "force of the collision was so great that one engine was tossed across the line while the other somersaulted." Three coaches of the excursion train were telescoped.

Scene Is Pitiful

There were most pitiful scenes. The collision occurred shortly after midnight at a darkened spot along the roadway. The crash of the two trains soon was followed by screams from the passengers, injured and trapped within the shattered cars of the excursion train.

Rescue crews quickly were mobilized and, working by lantern light, had to chop their way through the tangled and broken cars to reach the victims.

Some of those injured and killed were horribly mutilated and identification was most difficult.

Rush Aid to Scene

Ambulances, doctors and nurses were mobilized quickly and sent to the scene of the disaster, while hospitals close by soon were crowded with victims.

With the exception of the wartime wreck at Gretna, when 227 soldiers were killed, today's accident was the worst on a British railway since 1906.

Audley Dunham Selected to Repair Hand-Tooled Bronze Bertelli

By DAN M. KIDNEY
"Bertelli, Paris."

This name might not mean much to the ordinary citizen of Indianapolis, but when Audley Dunham came across it hand-tooled on the working parts of a huge lock he was mending he thrilled with the romance of his trade.

For Bertelli has been dead nearly a century. Yet at the time the sans culotte paraded with pikes in the French capital, years before the rise of Napoleon, the name Bertelli was beginning to appear on door-locks throughout the city of Paris. By the time the French republic was established, Bertelli had become a synonym for soundness and safety in lock construction. So much so that the citizens, who had some years previously stormed the bastille locksmithing while recuperating from overseas service with the Rainbow Division in an Army hospital at Denver. On his business card he uses the letters D. L. after his name. This stands for Doctor of Locks, he says.

So pleased was he upon receipt of a real Bertelli to repair that he has obtained permission from the owners to exhibit it at the Indiana State Fair this fall.

It will appear alongside a huge padlock, which one time served to lock a door in one of Queen Victoria's castles. The crown and initials "VR" appear on it.

SLATE HODGES FOR CABINET

Retiring G. O. P. Treasurer
May Succeed Work.

By United Press
SUPERIOR, Wis., June 28.—William V. Hodges of Denver, retiring Republican national committee treasurer, is mentioned here as the probable successor of Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior.

Secretary Work is expected to hand his resignation to the President when he visits Cedar Island Lodge, the summer White House, next week preparatory to assuming his new post as chairman of the Republican national committee, which entails supervision of the Hoover-Curtis campaign.

Hodges' regularity as a straight party man was said to be his outstanding asset for the Cabinet post. In Colorado State politics, as well as in the national political field, Hodges has taken a prominent part, devoting virtually his entire time to Republican interests.

Advocates of his appointment have emphasized the President's desire to reward those who have put the party's welfare above self-interest, and Hodges was listed as one of the dominant figures in that class.
