

Thanks to Convention Delegation

Appreciation of efforts of the Indiana delegation to the Democratic National convention to obtain adoption of plank proposed by the National League of Women Voters was expressed today by Mrs. Edna M. Christian, chairman of the committee of the Indiana League which presented the plank to Indiana delegates in the convention.

"Although the Democratic party did not specifically endorse the proposed plank, it was in the outpouring of war," Mrs. Christian said. "We regret that neither the Democratic nor Republican party went on record as in favor of the entry of the United States into the Permanent Court of International Justice."

"In its plank regarding congressional election reform the Democratic party stated that it was in favor of legislation which would fix the date for convening Congress immediately after biennial national election."

"We are glad to note that the Democratic party in its platform recognizes that the protection of children through infancy and childhood against exploitation is an important national duty and that the Federal Government is concerned with the education of its youth. We regret that it did not go further and state that it realized the necessity for the prevention of needless maternal and infant deaths."

Members of the Indiana League expressed themselves as particularly pleased with the plank of the Republican party which heartily endorsed the proposed multilateral treaty.

MARYE and 'MOM' THEIR LETTERS

Dear Mom—Things do happen to me these days. And just now, without my having had any part in the matter, Fate has just used me for a pawn again.

In the first place, this is my last week as a style model. I was not fired; I am leaving with a record of honorable service behind me, and Mrs. Elise will take me back in the fall if I want to go.

She says no one ever has worn her simple frocks with more distinction than I, and that she would enjoy designing for my type and just seeing what she could make out of my particular combination of lines and angles.

My career is closing temporarily because of Alan. He is really quite a deep person, with more understanding of my complex nature than I suspected. He has said nothing against my being in the shop, and has put no obstacles of any sort in my way. But just the same, I know now that he was really plotting the downfall of my independence.

He has been talking a great deal lately about the rush and bustle of the city, wishing he lived nearer the golf club, and complaining he was getting heavy because he can't exercise as much as he should.

It proved to be just that. Before dinner we surveyed the bathing beach, which was second to nothing I have ever seen. I was enchanted by the place, and after I tasted their fried chicken and waffles, I was maddened about it. Alan didn't say much.

During the dinner, I raved on, and Alan said that there was no reason why we should not come out and stay during the summer, if I wanted to—that the apartment would be hot anyhow, and that Mary wanted a vacation and we could pension her until fall—if my work were not too important to keep me in the city.

I thought of the good swim I could have every day, and of how I could play tennis in the afternoon, and clothes and careers seemed very unimportant, so I told Alan I'd gladly quit my job for a summer on the shore.

Before we went back to town we had reserved a suite overlooking the water, and that was that. But Alan did give himself away, and I'm perfectly sure he had it all planned that we would go there, and that he would let me sell myself on the idea rather than suggest it himself.

Well, anyhow, that wasn't the queerest part. After we had completed our arrangements, and Alan went to get the car, whom do you suppose I bumped right into. None other than my friend the crook-eyed eyebrows—Brother Shelton. And
