

WARNS PARENTS ON BABY CARE FOR HOT DAYS

Doctor Advises Close Guard on Food and Keeping Infant at Home.

Need for extreme care in tending infants and children during the hot weather season was cited today by Dr. Herman G. Morgan, city health officer.

"Contrary to the belief of the average citizen, hot weather is the healthiest season of the year, provided hygienic measures pertaining to diet, clothing and exercise are followed. It is a time when fresh air and ventilation are forced on every citizen in order to obtain comfort. In addition a great deal of time is spent outdoors," Dr. Morgan said.

"There is one class of the population, however, upon which extremely warm weather is trying—that is the infant and early age group of children. The majority of infants and children most frequently succumb to during the summer is gastro-intestinal infection or summer complaint.

Guard Milk Closely

"This condition generally results from two principal causes—contaminated food or milk and chill during the night. As milk is the principal food for the bottle fed group of infants as well as growing children, extreme care should be exercised in protecting milk from contamination.

"This can best be carried out by seeing that milk for children is always kept under proper refrigeration. Ice and milk are inseparable from the health standpoint in hot weather.

"Milk left in the sun for even a half hour will generate an increase in bacteria content many fold. Milk with such infectious material becomes a poison instead of a food. The mistake is frequently made when a child develops early symptoms of summer complaint of keeping the child on its regular diet.

Resort to Liquid Diet

"The proper procedure is to clean out the intestinal tract with oil and keep the infant or child upon water or liquid diet for twenty-four or forty-eight hours. This gives opportunity for the infected part of the intestinal tract to clear itself and not be irritated by food passing over the infected surface.

"By adopting this measure and consulting the family physician early the infant mortality rate from such infections can be greatly reduced.

"The body should be comfortably clothed during hot weather. One part of the body should always be protected with a light garment or binder, particularly at night—namely, the abdomen. Two or three tepid baths a day will assist a future citizen in weathering the hot spells and will make the child less fretful and irritable.

Keep Baby at Home

"The best place for the baby in the summer is at home. Babies do not stand vacations well, for this means change of environment and food. These changes are not borne well by the early age group.

"Flies in a household where there is a baby may be messengers of death—they carry contamination and may deposit it on the nursing bottle or the baby's hands," Dr. Morgan advised.

SHUN HOSPITAL TOPIC

Cabinet Devotes Time to Budget Discussion.

Discussion of the city hospital building program was avoided at Mayor L. Ert Slack's cabinet meeting Wednesday, it was indicated today.

Slack said there was no discussion of the hospital project, the entire two hours being devoted to budget talk.

The council Monday night denied the health board's request to suspend rules and authorize a $60,000 bond issue to provide fees for architects and an engineer for the hospital building program. Councilmen objected to the program because a consultant had not been employed and it was considered likely that the cabinet would take up the question.

Average of Discharges Is Low, Church Board
Contents.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, July 20.—A total of 1,135 prohibition unit employees were dismissed "for cause" from the time the unit began operations until Oct. 1, 1927, according to a tabulation of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals.

Dr. Clarence True Wilson, director of the board, declared that this represented only an annual average dismissal of 4.2 per cent, or about one person out of twenty-five dismissed each year.

"Some of the causes were unsatisfactory service and failure to file income tax returns," he said. "Only 158 were dismissed on charges of extortion, bribery or soliciting money, an average of 20.5 dismissals a year, or six out of each 1,000 employees.

"On charges of collusion and conspiracy, only three-tenths of 1 per cent of the prohibition agents have been dismissed.

"These percentages are astonishingly small, especially in view of the fact that wet politicians from certain States have exerted themselves to the utmost to secure the appointment of bad men.

"There has been far more corruption in New York City alone than in all the remainder of the country put together. Corruption has been confined almost wholly to the wet centers, where many of the same men who assail the law strive to promote its violation.

"There can be nothing more reprehensible than wholesale charges against the characters of poorly paid, overworked and honest men."

SHOW LINCOLN BUST

American Sculptor's Work
Displayed in London.

By United Press
LONDON, July 20.—A bust of Abraham Lincoln, carved by the American sculptor, Andrew O'Connor, in Indiana limestone, soon will be exhibited in the Royal Exchange building, London.

The bust has been acquired on loan by the city of London, and will remain on exhibition for six months. It is the first specimen of O'Connor's work to be seen in England.

The figure is the head and shoulders of a statue executed by O'Connor for the city of Springfield, Illinois and erected in 1916. In adapting this portion of the statue to the purpose, O'Connor has caused the head of Lincoln to rise from a massive block of stone, quarried in the vicinity of Lincoln's birthplace.

The O'Connor bust is the gift of the sculptor.
