

NELLIE ROSS IS DRY, BUT RAPS 'ANTI' LEAGUE

'Militant' Organization Is Guilty of Bad Faith, Says Ex-Governor.

BY DEXTER M. KEEZER
WASHINGTON, July 20.—Former Governor Nellie Taylor Ross of Wyoming, selected by National Chairman Raskob to direct Democratic women's activities during the coming campaign, is a "theoretical and practicing prohibitionist," who has a very low opinion of the political integrity of the Anti-Saloon League and other militant dry organizations.

She thinks they frequently have been guilty of "bad faith" in their efforts to secure rigorous prohibition enforcement through political action, and bases her conclusion partly on her experience as Governor of Wyoming.

Cites Record as Governor

"As Governor of Wyoming," Mrs. Ross recently explained, "I used every resource of the State to enforce the prohibition law in which I believe sincerely. I reorganized the enforcement division twice in an effort to secure better enforcement, and I took the lead in removing two sheriffs who were charged with laxity in enforcing the law.

"The dry organizations of the State cheered my efforts loudly, but when I came up for re-election on an enforcement record which they could not possibly attack, they followed their regular practice of voting the Republican ticket instead of supporting my enforcement program.

Evidence of 'Bad Faith'

Such action, Mrs. Ross says, is evidence of "bad faith" by the dry leaders who are first of all good party members.

Asked how, as an ardent dry, she can support Al Smith, outspoken enemy of the present prohibition law, Mrs. Ross explained that she has confidence that he would "direct better enforcement of the law than those who profess to love it more."

SHOCK STREAM PESTS

By United Press
AUSTIN, Texas, July 20.—In an effort to rid streams of predatory fish the State game department recently had opportunity to study the effect of electricity on fish.

A current of 330 to 440 volts was put into a stream. The shocked fish floated to the surface and the predatory ones were gathered and killed. Whereas fish and snakes came to the top when shocked, turtles went to the stream's bottom.

There were no fatalities from the electricity. One bass lay on the wire four minutes. It began to breathe in five minutes and soon swam away.

Wasp of Navy's Fleet

Here is the Navy's newest air fighter, an 800-pound plane carrying a motor of the same weight and with a like capacity load. Powered with a 600 horsepower motor, it flies 184 miles an hour at sea level and 200 miles an hour at an altitude of a mile. The plane, just received at North Island Naval Air Station, San Diego, Cal., is shown here, with Lieut. E. Chourre pointing out the streamline motors.

BRIDGES WASHED OUT

Detours Are Established on Several State Roads.

Several more bridge washouts were added to the list issued by the State highway department today. Two were on Rd. 34, near Covington.

ton, where a four and three-quarter-mile detour has been inaugurated.

Another washout is at a bridge four miles east of Crawfordsville, on the same road. A flagman is being kept there day and night to direct traffic.

Shoulders on Rd. 41, the main highway from Chicago to Evansville, were badly washed away, and at the junction of Rd. 34, near Veedersburg the water at one time stood twelve feet.
