There's No Harmless Flirtation

BY MARTHA LEE

Flirting is my subject today. That is, without doubt, one of the most dangerous outdoor sports for any girl or fellow to indulge in. It causes no end of trouble and sorrow and often shame and humiliation. It really isn't worth the momentary thrill that a girl gets from blinking her eyes at a stranger and having him look twice.

I am inclined to imagine that any number of these "gas hawk" cases that have been taking place are direct results of what youngsters are prone to call "harmless flirtations." That is a conflicting term. A flirtation cannot be harmless, however much we want to think it can.

I have a letter today from a poor young man who has been flirted with at one time or another, apparently, by some of Indianapolis' best flirts. And it has him all agog. He has suffered many rebukes, from the way his letter reads, and he simply cannot understand a mentality that revels in putting up a false front. In other words, he cannot see the why and wherefore that causes a girl to give a strange man every indication that she was simply perishing to make his acquaintance and then the minute he attempts to do, what he believes the desired thing, and tries to trump up a conversation, he gets an Alaskan glance and a perfect picture of her, but he is miffed and offended womanhood. Now, I ask you, girls, is that fair, or sportsmanlike, or womanly? Of course it isn't, and not only that, but it is cheap and common and deceptive.

And when the reason happens to be that the fellow turns out to be "careless," there is a "careless" term in my meager vocabulary to describe what a dirty trick it has been.

Here is the poor young man's letter:

Dear Miss Lee: Pray tell me, what is the matter with the young girls of the present generation that they will give you that wistful eye sign to attract a man and when he stops to talk, as he thinks the young lady wishes him to, he is glared at furiously and passed on? And especially when said ladies find out that he is not a stray millionaire and has not got an eight cylinder Packard? Parked around the corner?

I have no time for so-called wild women, but some of these girls I was talking about in the letter, I think, are not so wild as they appear. They are nice looking, quiet, well-mannered girls. What's the idea?

I don't know what the trouble is. It is probably a desire to do something reckless and exciting, and then getting too scared to carry the plan through. But it is a mean trick, and I don't blame you for being baffled. But between us, the girls who do that sort of thing, no matter what they look like, are not the kind of girls you have described that you would like to know. The street is hardly an ideal parlor where nice girls gather. Try some of your friends, go to church affairs or any community gathering place where it will be possible to meet girls through introduction and you will probably become acquainted with the kind of girls you want to know.

YOUR CHILD—Twin Causes of Lying

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

We know that the chief cause of lying in a child is fear of punishment.

But the secondary cause of lying, although less common, is more pernicious than the first. It is the wish to injure another child. It is born of jealousy—and as a result, hatred of that child.

I believe that more unhappiness in the world is caused by jealousy than by any other evil passion we possess. It lies under crime. It lies under ill health. It wars against wise and admirable characters, until all sense of honor and decency vanishes.

Correct It Early

It is one of the first things I should try to root out of a child's make-up. And I should begin early.

We shall say that Billy is 5. His brother Jerry is 7.

Billy has been wanting a certain wagon like the one his friend Larry has. There is one in the window at Love's toy store all painted a bright blue with red wheels. Billy wants that wagon more than anything he ever has wanted in his life.

But along comes Jerry's birthday and Jerry is given the wagon. Jerry, of course, has been wanting it, too.

Suddenly there is born in Billy's heart such a feeling of jealousy and hatred of Jerry that he must go out, throw himself on the grass and bite the ground. He has a deep desire to do something that will injure Jerry in his parent's eyes. He can't think of anything so he makes up a lie, two lies, ten lies in the next week, all about poor Jerry.

This is merely an illustration. But there are many Billys.

Always Explain

A wise mother will say: "Look here, Billy. Tomorrow is Jerry's birthday and daddy and I are going to give him that little wagon you wanted, and as his birthday comes first we were sure you wouldn't mind if he got it this
