

FEDERAL PROBE OF PRISONS TO START AUG. 28

Charges of Lax Discipline, Drug Pandering Will Be Investigated.

BY KENNETH WATSON
WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Charges of irregularities in Federal prisons, including complaints of favoritism to influential prisoners, laxity in paroles and supply of prisoners with drugs by prison guards will be investigated within the next few weeks by a special congressional committee.

Representative John G. Cooper, Youngstown, chairman of the committee, today advised Government officials that the committee will hold its initial meeting in Cleveland Aug. 28. A special committee of the Cleveland Association of Criminal Justice, headed by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, has been making a study of Ohio prison conditions.

The committee then will go to Columbus to inspect the State Penitentiary and then to Chillicothe to probe conditions at the Federal Industrial Reformatory. Aug. 31 the committee will inspect the new Federal Prison for Women at Alderson, W. Va.

It has been admitted by Department of Justice officials that deplorable conditions have existed in the three main Federal prisons at Atlanta, Leavenworth and McNeil Island for years because of overcrowding.

The total cell capacity of the three prisons is 3,738, but more than 7,000 prisoners are confined. This necessitates quartering of prisoners in corridors, making smuggling of narcotics comparatively easy.

Representative Thomas M. Bell of Georgia, to whom most of the complaints about conditions at Atlanta have been made, has announced that he will insist upon every charge being run down.

Among those who are expected to be called as witnesses are Dorothy Knapp, New York actress; Earl Carroll, Broadway producer, and former Governor Warren T. McCray of Indiana.

Lee already is charged in Criminal Court as a result of his handling of the cafeteria company finances. He was cited for contempt by Superior Judge Byron K. Elliott, before whom the receivership is pending, for his alleged refusal to turn over books and assets of the firm to Henderson, soon after Henderson's appointment as receiver.

Judgment of $1,300, the amount alleged to have been unaccounted for, is asked in today's suit.

AL AND WALSH TO TALK OVER OIL SCANDALS

Visit of Montana Senator to Close Week's Parleys With Leaders.

By United Press
ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 17.—With a visit by Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, Tea Pot Dome investigator, Governor Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential nominee, today will bring to a close a week's conferences on political conditions, and prepare to gain as much rest as possible before delivering his acceptance speech next Wednesday night.

It is anticipated here that Walsh will go into details on conditions he unearthed while investigating the leases of the naval oil reserves, and that the Governor will gain many points from the Senator to use in his campaign, particularly on the subject of honesty in government and consolidation of the departments and bureaus.

The Montana legislator is due to arrive at the executive mansion this afternoon, and probably will be an overnight guest of Smith, as was Senator Walter F. George, Georgia, who arrived late Thursday evening.

George Also Is Visitor

George declined to be interviewed after his conference with Smith, whom he joined at the dinner table. Before seeing the Governor, however, he expressed the conviction that Georgia would be found in the Democratic column with a good majority for the Empire State Governor.

The visit of George marked the third of well known southern dry leaders, he having been preceded by Josephus Daniels, Raleigh (N. C.), and Senator Carter Glass, Virginia.

Smith today stood accused of raising a park issue with Republican legislative leaders in a "desperate effort to distract attention from the Governor's unsavory legislative record recently revealed by his opponents within his own party."

The charge was made by Assemblyman Eberly T. Hutchinson, the chairman of the assembly ways and means committee, in an answer to Smith's attack on the leaders for failure to provide funds for surveying parkways and to purchase the Albany Boys Academy in this city.

Issue in State Campaign

The assertion of the Governor that Senator Hewitt, chairman of the Senate finance committee, and Hutchinson were "obstructors" of the Long Island Park program was characterized by the assemblyman as an "unqualified lie."

As a result of the statements of the Governor and Hutchinson, it is expected that the park issue will be prominently raised in the coming gubernatorial campaign, and also is believed that Smith will play a more prominent part in the State campaign than heretofore had been expected.

In his statement, Hutchinson insisted there is no emergency which makes action imperative at this time, and that legislative sanction first should be had before any further steps are taken. He also asserted an agreement was in existence to the effect that no expenditures would be asked for the northern parkway on Long Island until the southern parkway and Jones Beach causeway are completed.

Smith is expected to make an answer to Hutchinson today or Saturday.

CHEMIST BARES THRIVING TRADE 'OILING' 'ALKY'

Exposes Process of Raising Proof of Poor Liquor With Adulterant.

By United Press
EVANSTON, Ill., Aug. 17.—Manufacturers of "pure and spirits and alcohol" were scarce around Chicago until the "bead oil" man appeared with a chemical to raise the proof of poor liquor, William Hoskins declared before the American Chemical Society Institute tonight.

Hoskins, one of the country's deans of chemistry, said he remembered when there were only four alcohol manufacturers in Chicago. "It wasn't long before a 'bead oil' man came on the scene," he said, "to contribute a chemical that could raise the proof of the liquor so it could be passed off as par."

Wooden Water Pipes

"Caramel coloring followed, and the foundations of what now seems to be such thriving anti-legal industry was laid on a purely scientific basis."

Hoskins lived in Chicago in the days when scientists and chemists labored under difficulties to make experiments.

"The first Chicago chemical works were devoted to the making of wooden water pipes," Hoskins said. "Some of them, dug up recently, are looked upon as antiquity rarities. Yet they were used in this city in my youth."

Made Experiments at Night

In the days before electric meters were discovered, he said, men carried zinc plates in containers over their shoulders resembling Chinese water carriers to measure current.

"By weighing these plates after charge," Hoskins explained, "the local company could determine the flow of its current. The current flow was little to brag about. There wasn't enough for experimentation."

"When I needed a large flow for work on alloys, I would build a hut near a transformer station, and work between the hours of 10 at night and 4 in the morning. After seven years of such experimentation, we developed chromal—the wire used in thermopiles and other electrical appliances."

MT. VESUVIUS AGAIN SPOUTS BLAZING LAVA

Flames, Molten Rock Sent High Into Air After Brief Lull.

By United Press
NAPLES, Italy, Aug. 17.—Mt. Vesuvius renewed its spectacular eruption Thursday night and today.

Liquid fire pouring from the bowels of the earth furnished a spectacle both terrifying and fascinating.

After a brief lull in its activity which began Aug. 7, the unusually sleeping giant began again to emit lava, flames and dense smoke.

The molten rock slides down the slope of the summit through a subterranean passage 2,000 feet long, then emerges to break into three fiery streams which fall into "Hell Valley." One stream, twelve feet at the start, flows at the rate of six feet a second, spreading out as it advances.

The streams today had reached the barrier of rocks raised in past times on the eastern slopes of Mount Somma to check eruptions.

The main eruptive cone of Vesuvius already is surrounded by a smaller one, which emits dense, sulphuric smoke in the daytime and is a glowing pillar at night visible for miles.

Monster Scares White River Fishermen.

Quarter-Ton Creature

By Times Special
SHOALS, Ind., Aug. 17.—Martin County and other fishermen are afraid to angle at a point in White River near Trinity Springs through fear of a monster which several assert they have sighted in the water. It is described as being eight to ten feet long and weighing 500 pounds.

Two men fishing from a boat said the monster tried to attack them, and in one lunge almost upset the boat. Another man reports he shot at the monster with a rifle, but a bullet which struck it glanced off as if it had encountered armor.

An old river man expresses the belief that the creature is a giant sturgeon fish. He recalls that for thirty years there has been a story current that a huge specimen of that fish inhabits a deep hole in the river near where the monster has been reported seen.
