

Advise Girl to Quit Man for Respect

WHEN a man can blind a woman to his wrongdoings and make her, against all human judgment, think that he has been sitting up with a sick friend or working overtime at the office, he can not possibly have much respect for her.

And that does not mean that every time he does have to stay out over the allotted eight hours that he is out making whoopee. And therein lies a woman's power to be admired. When she is able to distinguish between a real situation and a cooked-up one. And when it is a cooked-up one and she knows it, the next problem is to handle the ensuing discussion with dexterity.

More often than not, it is cause for what the comics like to picture as a big pan and rolling pin throwing contest, with the husband on the receiving end. Or a big word squabble which is even worse, because it lasts longer and sometimes word bruises are much harder to heal.

I sincerely believe that a man admires a woman who he can not put anything over on. At the same time he hates one who is constantly suspicious. And why can not women learn to be like men? To take things for granted until proven otherwise. I should have said, like some men, because unfortunately all men do not possess this trait.

But today I have a letter from a woman who has foolishly blinded herself to at least some serious acting. She says:

"Dear Miss, I love a man as most women do. I am in his life, and he says he loves me. When I am with him his every action proves this to be true. He is a good man, I love him very much. He does anything wrong, it hurts me terribly, but that doesn't seem to have any effect on him. He has tried to prove that he loved me by avoiding another woman. Two days later he spent the afternoon with her."

He tells me he does not care for her, but I suppose he tells her the same thing about me. They are thrown together daily by her scheming to spend an hour a day with him. I am to blame for this, but she would not come if he did not give her some kind of encouragement.

When he is angry with her, when he has been with her it makes him angry. When he offers the slightest excuse I am ready to believe him, even though he is not.

Should I break with him. He tells and even begs me not to, but turns right around and says he loves me.

Even my health is bad from so much worry.

YOUR CHILD Let Child Be Original

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE "headstrong" child! What about him? Is he a black sheep, an incorrigible, one to be lamented, berated and apologized for?

Not a bit of it. Quite the opposite. Be careful. If you have a "headstrong" son or daughter, you have a prize.

But like all precious things, care must be used in the handling.

"I never could conquer John," sighs a mother unhappily. "He never listens to a word I say."

"Mary thinks she knows it all," says another mother. "She pays no more attention to my commands than if I were a radio. I mean absolutely nothing to her."

Both of these mothers have made fearful admissions of failure. They are to be pitied, of course, but not so much because their children won't stand dictation as because they themselves are unconsciously showing their lack of knowledge of their children and their inability to cope with characters stronger than their own.

By making children do exactly as you say, you may be getting submissive obedience, but are you getting other things?

True, I would not throw obedience to the winds. No household can be without fundamental law. But you can do wonders with the headstrong child by reasoning with him and talking to him and showing him that not only others but he himself will suffer by thoughtless impulsive behavior. What he needs is guiding, not managing.

After all what is child training but molding. And you can not always set your own pattern. You must mold according to the material you have.

I get tired of hearing the weak, docile child praised and the strong-willed, so-called headstrong child condemned. The men and women who get to the top are almost invariably the ones who had minds of their own as children.

Of course, there is such a thing as incorrigibility—the nature that acknowledges no law and no master. But that is abnormal and not so common as people think. Such children need special attention. They are really pathological cases.

But don't try to beat or pull-down or nag a fine child into complete submission merely to satisfy your craving for superiority, or your desire to pattern him after an idea of your own. You would not try to make a mastiff into a lap-dog.

Short Fur Coats

For fall, emphasis is being placed upon short fur coats in mink, squirrel, rabbit and the novelty furs.

NEW DISTINCTION

Intricate cut at front gives new distinction to a becoming street and sports model. Cluster plaits stitched part way for tailored effect are released to flare gracefully in motion.

Style No. 3402 will immediately appeal to the woman who is looking for something a little out of the ordinary with slenderizing lines. It adapts itself beautifully to the popular printed silk crepe with plain crepe used for vestee, shawl collar, pockets and cuffs. Shantung, crepe, satin and sheer woolen are appropriate. Pattern in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust.

The Pythian Sisters of Irvington Temple No. 411 will give a card party at 8:30 Saturday evening at the K. of P. Hall, 132½ S. Audubon Rd. Estella Thayer is chairman in charge of arrangements.

Laundry Savings

If you hang all your clothes of a kind together, when laundering, and sprinkle and iron in the same order, you will find much time saved in extra handling required in sorting afterwards.
