YOUR CHILD Care of Teeth Important

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Children learn about their teeth and their care at school, then come home and never say a word about it.

Many parents thing first teeth to be of no importance. When first teeth get holes in them and ache they are tied to door-knobs or apples, and presto, bango, away they go.

It's all wrong. First teeth should be saved as long as possible. Every little hole should be filled with white filling or amalgam and saved until the tooth is pushed out by the second one coming through.

Every child, no matter how little should have a tooth brush. His teeth should be scrubbed when he gets up, before he goes to bed, and after each meal with a good paste or powder.

Mothers should give each brush a salt rub once a day. Allow the salt to lie right in the brush. It kills germs. And hang the brushes where the sun can get them. Don't use a tooth-brush too long. Buy a new one once in a while.

The first molars or double teeth come at the side of the upper and lower jaws at 6 years of age. Watch them. They have to last all through life, are usually soft and decay easily. Almost invariably they are the first to go.

Nearly all disease germs of childhood start in the mouth, throat and nose passages. The gargle habit is a good one and prevents sickness.

Have the children's teeth filled as soon as you see a hole. Have the dentist clean the tartar off their teeth every three months. And even if you see no signs of trouble, take them to the dentist for a thorough inspection every six months.

Malformation of teeth and misshapen mouths can be straightened out like magic these days. It isn't so expensive. Some orthodontists I know permit their patients to make small payments as the treatment progresses.

HOME WITH SPANISH NOTE

The Rio Verda, with its colored stucco, tiled roof and square lines, catches much of the romance of the old Spanish architecture which inspired it.

This is the house for a big, level piece of land that may have trees in the background, but none across the front. For the Rio Verda suggests the bare stretches of hot countries, and is at home where vegetation is sparse.

For comfort, one could search far from a home that affords one such ample room. Three bed rooms are included in its plan, and none of them small.

The living room has its fireplace for cool evenings, its windows on two sides for sunny days. A pleasant feature is the side terrace opening off the dining room.

This home was built for living as well as romantic thoughts. The kitchen proves that. Here you find everything to save steps, time and energy; built-in refrigerator, ironing board, cabinet, broom closet and range. And, of course, a convenient breakfast nook that looks out on the palm trees or the distant brown hills in the rear.

The price of the Rio Verda is from $6,000 to $7,000.

Noble Ropkey, representing the alumnae; Miss Elizabeth Moschenross, representing the senior class; Miss Marjorie Goble, junior class, and Miss Marion Barnard, sophomore class. ## Wives, Have More Faith in Husbands

BY MARTHA LEE

I do wish some one would write about a "different" problem for a change. Either the advice I give about subjects simply does not "take" or else every one feels that their own special problem needs special attention on more personal consideration.

Which is absolutely true. Every case is different, regardless of how similar they may appear from the outside. There are the differences in character, circumstances, past misdeeds, ages, exterior influences—oh, a hundred things that make each case an individual one.
