

TALKING
IT OVER
WITH JOE WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The veterans Arthur Vance—The Dazzler, they call him—fanned seven batters Wednesday while he was handing the flustered St. Louis Cardinals a 6-1 setback. His seventh victim toppled in the ninth inning and was a righthanded hitter, Douthit, the center fielder.

There was nothing particularly dramatic about the situation, for the Brooklyn had moved into a commanding lead. Yet to the Dazzler, it meant a great deal to strike out this batter and close the game.

It is his custom to pitch against all batters with the meticulous care of an English valet eliminating a flake of dust from the surface of a silk topper, but against Douthit he pitched with extraordinary care.

The first pitch was a fast one that nipped the inside corner and the pudgy Rigler raised his right arm and bellowed, "Strike." The next one was in the same spot and Douthit swung. It was a foul ball and it meant another strike.

THEY threw another ball out of the Dazzler and he rubbed it laboriously into the palm of his oil-soaked glove. He stepped into the box took his wind up and let fly with a tremendous pitch. When Douthit swung and missed there was a rush for Vance.

Bauroff, captain of the team, shook his hand. The chilled fans streamed over the rails and surrounded him. Deberry, the catcher, tried to save the ball. Three festive flatbushers took it away from him, using nothing more persuasive than physical violence, and hoped there would be no hard feeling.

THIS WAS THE BALL WITH WHICH THE DAZZLER HAD STRUCK OUT HIS 200TH MAN OF THE YEAR. WHEN HE STARTED THE GAME WEDNESDAY HE HAD TWO AMBITIONS. ONE WAS TO BEAT THE CARDINALS, THE OTHER WAS TO STRIKE OUT SEVEN MEN. HIS STRIKEOUT TOTAL WAS 193. SEVEN WOULD GIVE HIM AN EVEN 200 FOR THE SEASON.

Only twice before during a career that had its professional beginning back in 1912 had he been able to fan as many as 200 or more batters. In 1924 he fanned 262, his greatest year, and in 1925 he fanned 221. The following year he skidded to 140, and last year his total was 184.

The Dazzler pitched one of his great games Wednesday to score his twenty-second victory of the year with one of the most mediocre ball clubs in captivity. Except for a lapse of control in the first inning when he walked four batters to force in the league leaders' only run he was as hard to hit as a dancing moonbeam, and twice as mysterious.
