

CHARGES SMITH 'KIDDING' PARTY ON LIQUOR HOPE

No Benefit to Wets From Electing Al, Asserts Grain Trader.

By United Press
CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—James A. Patten, generally regarded as the world's greatest trader in grain, declared today that Governor Alfred E. Smith is "kidding his nearest friends" in his stand on prohibition and the Volstead Act.

Patten declared in effect that the election of Governor Smith is in no wise aid the man who sincerely is opposed to prohibition, nor would his proposals, as outlined in his campaign speech at Milwaukee Saturday be of any benefit to the individual who looks for a return of the legitimate sale of alcoholic beverages.

No Hope in Proposals
In a lengthy statement Patten emphasized that to those who are opposed in principle to the Eighteenth amendment and who regard it as destructive to the proper relation between the Federal Government and the citizen, there is no hope for relief in Governor Smith's proposals.

"Of course, there are those who get emotional satisfaction out of any wet promise," the statement continued.

"The intelligent opponent," Patten declared, "searches for a suggestion that the Eighteenth amendment be repealed. He wonders why Smith does not urge repeal. He has read Governor Smith's indictment of the abuses and evils caused by the amendment. If this indictment be true, why not repeal the amendment? But this Governor Smith does not even suggest. One is forced to conclude then that Governor Smith recognizes the futility of such a course."

In reviewing the recommendations made by Governor Smith, Patten said: "He proposes 'an amendment to the Eighteenth amendment which will give to each individual State itself, only after approval by a referendum popular vote of its people, the right, wholly within its borders to import, manufacture, and sell alcoholic beverages, the sale to be made by the State itself and not for consumption in any public place."

System Proved Failure
"But the inquiring man then says: Suppose this Smith suggestion were adopted? What would be the result?"

"Each individual State that so desires is to be set up in the liquor business. The Canadian system is held up as our standard. Yet in the country where it is used that system is condemned as productive of graft and corruption. The wet who knows the history of his own country recalls a still more striking standard of comparison. He remembers the South Carolina experiment. He recalls how that State after only a few years' trial abandoned the scheme."

Words Failed

By Times Special
BICKNELL, Oct. 1.—Ted Davidson and John Cottrell engaged in a street corner argument as to whether new State Rd. 67 is on a route crossing a railroad or runs all the way to Vincennes on one side of the track. Words failed them, so they used fists. Both entered guilty pleas in city court and drew suspended sentences. Davidson confessed to profanity and assault and battery. Cottrell admitted profanity.

CONDUCTOR FOR 51 YEARS, QUILTS

E. A. Orr Retires From Long Service on Big 4.

E. A. Orr, 1120 N. La Salle St., Big Four passenger conductor, says he is tired of trains, after active service for fifty-one years on the same division of the Big Four Railroad. He was retired Sunday with ceremonies at the Union Station.

Unlike the proverbial postman who spends his vacations hiking, Orr is "just going to loaf," according to his own statement. When the train steamed into the Union Station from Cleveland, Ohio, at 2:40 p. m. Sunday, Orr was met by a party of friends and railroad officials who congratulated him on his long service. His wife, who had joined him at Muncie to be with him on his last official trip, carried an armful of roses. Miss Hazel C. Orr, daughter, physical director in the Woodward High School, Cincinnati, also surprised her father by getting on his train at Cleveland Sunday.

Orr went to work for the Big Four at the age of 19, has not missed a pay day and never has figured in a serious wreck.

H. O. Schuyler, superintendent of passenger transportation, welcomed Orr Sunday with the statement: "We're mighty proud of 'Pete'; there's not a mark against his record anywhere."

MADONNA TYPE OF BRUNETTE BEAUTY SHOULD WEAR RED

Marjorie Mulhall, Johnston's "Madonna type" of brunette.

This is the third of a series of articles written for The Times and News Service by Alfred Cheney Johnston, one of the foremost artists among American photographers. Each day he discusses a type of feminine beauty, explains how it best can be enhanced by makeup and costume, tells which color schemes and styles of gowns he considers most effective.

BY ALFRED CHENEY JOHNSTON

IN the preceding articles I discussed the Gainsborough blonde and the Greuze brunette. The one I am about to discuss is ageless. She has beautifully defined features, an expression soft as a dove's and a figure that is supremely graceful. I call her the "Madonna" beauty, because all of the great masters of religious paintings, whether of Latin or Nordic origin, have pictured the Madonna in this way. She is a brunette, but neither typically Italian, Spanish, French or Irish—but rather a combination of all four.

Such a beauty is Marjorie Mulhall, who poses for many of my pictures. She is about five feet, seven inches tall, has dark brown hair and eyes that are very beautiful in expression.

Her skin is rich in coloring, with that sun-kissed hue so many girls try to attain by exposing themselves to the elements.

Naturally this type will use only an ochre powder for daytime. In the evening, the ochre powder should carry a tinge of rose in its foundation to best bring out the beauty of her skin under electric lights.

If any rouge is used, it should be more or less of an orange-tinted one, especially for evening.

Frequently, this type can renounce rouge entirely and make up her lips alluring but quietly in its stead.

With an oval face and beautifully shaped ears like Miss Mulhall's, the "Madonna" type of girl looks best with slight "sideburns," the hair drawn back to reveal the ears, and caught in a graceful knot at the nape of the neck.

LEGION PARLEY BRANDED HUGE 'SOUSE PARTY'

Florida Editor Shocked by What He Says He Saw in Dry Indiana.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—In a letter to the New York Times, W. M. Glenn, publisher of the Orlando (Fla.) Morning Sentinel, describes the Indiana American Legion convention at Lafayette last August in terms of a "medieval drinking bout."

Glenn describes himself as a former student of De Pauw University, and says that though he visited Purdue when the saloons were running wide open in Lafayette, he never saw or could imagine such medieval drinking bouts as he saw in 1928. The letter describes conditions of alleged lawlessness in Indiana as portrayed by a staff correspondent of the Chicago Tribune.

The letter follows in full: "Editor New York Times: I just have read your editorial, 'Way Down Upon the Wabash River,' in Wednesday's Times, in which reference is made to Senator Watson and 'dry Indiana' and liquor conditions in that grand old State of politicians and scholars.

Runs Into Wild Scene

"The last week in August a business mission took me to Indiana. I went to Lafayette and ran into a State convention of the American Legion. I have been to many conventions, but it is my conviction that this convention outshone anything ever staged by the Elks, Shriners, Moose, K. of C., Knights Templar, Odd Fellows or Hoo Hoos. The hotel was a raging mass of legionnaires, all set for a lovely session.

"Their breaths and the steaming perspiration were a combination of the varied alcoholic odors from the champagne cellars of Rheims to the immense vats of Busch's brewery in St. Louis, with several North Carolina moonshine stills and kitchen home brew parlors thrown in.

"As it is 'unlawful' to attempt to define drunkenness, I only say that the boys were having a big time. Taking the elevator, I went to my floor, stepped out and straight ahead I saw a room that resembled a bottle factory. Several boys were draped around chairs and beds.

"I cannot swear that anything

So They Part

By Times Special
EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 1.—Divorces were granted as follows in one day's session of court here for the grounds stated:
Ida from John Youngrens. He was gone fifteen years and came back to find she had sued for divorce.
Earl H. from Nan Sudduth. They never agreed on anything.
Lillian from John Fehn. He was often brought home drunk from his job as a shoe clerk.
Elizabeth from Robert Ohning. He slammed doors and called her "a two-faced cat."
Mary R. Kaster's husband told her he was too good-looking to be married.

Intoxicating had been in the bottles. Reaching my room, I gazed from a window to the street scene below. Where bedlam was reigning. At right angles to the sidewalks, surrounded by six or seven boys with them was a five-gallon demijohn. Nobody was allowed to pass the car unless he took a drink from the jug.

"The next morning I went into a barber shop to get a shave. This is the conversation I overheard: 'Wasn't that a sight last night on the square? Did you see that little boy? He's an orphan boy, 8 years old, and goes everywhere with one of the buddies. He can shoot craps and drink as much likker as the big fellows.'

Everybody Gets Laugh

"Everybody in the shop laughed, including two women who were getting their hair bobbed. Lafayette is the seat of Purdue University. It is chiefly famous for George Ade, John T. McCutcheon and his brother, George Barr McCutcheon. They were there in the late '80s.

"I attended De Pauw University in 1910, and have visited Purdue University when saloons were running wide open. I never saw or could imagine such medieval drinking bouts as I saw in 1928. Neither could John or George. Hooray for Dry Indiana."

Arrives for Speech Before Convention Tonight, Ending Tour.

By United Press
ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Rochester turned out in droves today, with a brass band and all trapping, to welcome Governor Alfred E. Smith home to New State from his travels in the West. The Democratic candidate met at the station by a cheering mob and headed a parade through the city to the Hotel Seneca. A special train arrived from the West at 9:30.

Speaks Tonight

Tonight Smith will address the State Democratic convention, which opens today for a two-day session, and there he will issue a call for Democratic forces up and down the line to rally for the battle, in which forty-five electoral votes are at stake.

He will demonstrate he still is leader in his own State when he says the word about the man who shall run to succeed him.

The Democratic candidate returned today without his brown derby, which made such a hit in the West. He gave his second on away in Milwaukee Sunday to Thomas O'Malley, president of the local "Brown Derby Club." O'Malley gave him another great Derby dog, "Caesar," to join "Jeff" manager at Albany.

Pleased With Result

Smith returned highly over his western campaign, a veiled shot at the type paigning of his Republican opponent, Herbert Hoover.

"I think the people of the try are fed up on set speeches, meaningless phrases. There doubt about that."

"I think it is an innovation them to talk right out, talk plain and give them, as I put it at Paul, the 'low-down' on the situation. They never get that in speeches."

There are more than half as many electoral votes at stake in his State as in all of the western States he visited, which together cast but campaign directors regard a tory as depending upon carrying at least a few of those farm States out of them, Montana and Wisconsin looked most likely prospects appears the battle will be fought in most of the others.
