Write Speeches for Robin-sin, Charges Editor.

'AL OBEYS WHIP CRACK'

'No Klansmen Ever More Serf Than Smith to Saloon and Interests.'

By United Press
EMPORIA, Kansas, Oct. 2.—William Allen White, Emporia editor, today charged the "cocktail hostlers of Tammany Hall" with preparing the speeches of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic candidate for vice president.

White's statement was in keeping with his promise to have "something interesting to say."

Senator Robinson was quoted by White as saying that White had accused Governor Alfred E. Smith of being in sympathy with immorality and vice.

"I do not believe," White said, "that Senator Robinson would issue a deliberate, malicious and obvious lie. He is a square man. But I do believe that the cocktail hostlers of Tammany Hall, who are preparing his speeches for him, have placed him in a most embarrassing position. I have never said what he charged me with."

White had reference to portions of Senator Robinson's speech delivered at Wichita last night.

"Let Senator Robinson produce a single anti-Tammany vote of young Al Smith on the saloon."

Tammany good for the liquor interests when Smith was in the assembly and so poisoned his mind that honest as he was and is, courageous and smart, he thought those votes were right, and considering his political background and his political salvation they were right.

"I have no criticism and never had, of Smith as a man, but as a voice of Tammany, as a Tammany leader in the Legislature and as a Tammany candidate for President, his Tammany record stands as an evidence of the Tammany taint in his mind. Joe Robinson knows this."

White thanked Robinson for referring to magazine articles, written by White, in which Governor Smith was praised, and then expressed his admiration for Smith as a man.

"I have the highest regard and shall always testify as to his (Smith's) good qualities. And if for his sins of consorting with Tammany today tipplers who have wrecked the Democratic party so many times in the past, Joe Robinson will read a book of mine extolling Governor Smith, Joe Robinson will be a better and nobler man."

Admires All as Man

"I have printed Smith's record on the saloon, page by page, paragraph by paragraph, carefully protecting Governor Smith personally from any taint upon his character, declaring always my faith in him as a man."

"What I said was that his record was a Tammany record, that he voted in the Legislature invariably with the pug-uglies of Tammany whenever the saloon and its interests or associates were touched."

The Emporia editor, continuing his attack on Tammy, said that organization is "like the Ku-Klux Klan in robbing a man of his individuality and deadening his conscience."

"The records showing the long string of Tammany votes which young Al Smith cast in the assembly prove that no Klansmen was ever more subservient to the crack of the klieg's whip than Al Smith in the assembly for the saloon and its interests." That what I really said.

No Derbies!

City Canvass Fails* to Yield Brown Hats
for Democrats.

WHAT, no brown derby?

Yes, nary a brown derby

in Indianapolis.

This was the sad news scouts

of the Young Men's Democratic

Club learned when they canvassed

Indianapolis hat shops.

The Young Men's Democratic

Club wanted to use 300 of them

Wednesday night. Frank C.

Dalley, Democratic candidate, opens his local campaign for the governorship that night with a meeting in the South Side Turners

Hall. The club planned to march to the meeting decked in the headgear which Governor Al Smith

has made the Democratic campaign symbol.

When the club scouts brought the news that there is nary a brown derby in town to Clarence

P. Frenzel, club secretary, hurried conferences were held and relief calls sent to Chicago and New York. Admissibility of rushing a shipment of the hats here by airplane was discussed.

But brown derbies are bulky things and even an airplane load would not cover the heads of many young Democrats.

So the Young Men's Democratic

Club will march into the Daley meeting, Wednesday night wearing felts, fedoras or what have you.

UNDERWOOD IS SURRENDERED
BY BONDSMANDefendant Held in Crime

DELAY SCHARFFIN MOVE

Judge Collins Again Refuses to Permit Him to Act as Own Lawyer.

Donald Underwood, professional bondsman, today was surrendered in Criminal Court by his bondsman, Mike Bova, and returned to the custody of the sheriff. Bova, withdrawing from the $2,500 bail.

Underwood was in court to file a motion to quash his indictment when Bova appeared and withdrew from the bond.

Underwood is charged with conspiring with Edward Trautgott, merchant; Paul Scharffin, attorney; Fred (Pickles) O'Roark, former policeman, and Homer Wright, alleged habitual criminal, to violate the liquor laws. Underwood was attempting to obtain another bondsman.

The indictment was the outgrowth of the general crime investigation following the mysterious explosion which wrecked the Trautgott clothing store Aug. 26.

Scharffin Pleas Refused
Criminal Judge James A. Collins took Underwood's motion to quash, which alleged insufficiency of the indictment, under advisement until Saturday when he will rule on similar motions of the other defendants.

Scharffin was having difficulty in getting his motion to quash before Collins. He attempted to file it as his own attorney Monday, but Collins directed him to get other counsel.

Later, Monday, Scharffin announced that law permitted him to be his own attorney and he intended to do so. He conferred with Collins again today. The court told him he would have to get another attorney and he could have a day or so to look around for one.

Sidestep Entering Pleas
Trautgott, Wright and O'Roark sidestepped entering pleas when Ira M. Holmes, their attorney, filed separate motions to quash for each of them. Judge Collins will rule on these later. If overruled the defendants will enter their pleas.

The indictment alleged the men conspired to sell, manufacture and transport liquor in Marion County, thereby committing a felony. Mrs. Joseph Fairhead, 713 S. Illinois St., political worker, was named as the only witness against the men.

Trautgott also is under $25,000 bond in Federal Court and due to go to trial there Nov. 13 on a charge of violating the national law that prevents interstate transportation of stolen automobiles.

When arraigned Monday morning, Trautgott and Wright stood side by side. They smiled at each other in a friendly fashion and while notations were being made by the court, whispered to each other.

Check Jewelry Records
The Marion County grand jury passed the Trautgott explosion case for the day. The jury returned to routine business and is expected to resume the blast investigation later in the week.

The jury has before it a record book of the Windsor Jewelry Company which bears a number contained in a watch that was found in Trautgott's store following the fire. The watch had one number scratched, but detectives traced the watch through a hidden number.

Prosecutors know the man in whose name the watch was left at the shop. They are working on the theory that it might be one of those stolen in the Broadmoor Country Club hold-up May 30. Prosecutors, however, said the watch has not been identified. Trautgott says the watch was given to him by a customer on July 4.

Police officers and detectives who investigated the Broadmoor robbery were witnesses before the grand jury Monday.
