

SMITH TO POLL HEAVY VOTE IN PENNSYLVANIA

Normal G. O. P. Majority to Be Cut Greatly in Keystone State.

Here is the first of a series of articles by editors of Scripps-Howard newspapers in various sections of the country analyzing the political situation in their territories. Others will follow.

BY JOHN Y. CHIDESTER
Editor, The Pittsburgh Press
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 5.—Pennsylvania will not depart, this year, from its custom of giving a plurality to Republican presidential candidates. However, Hoover will not have as big lead as Harding and Coolidge.

That is the judgment both Republican and Democratic leaders express privately. There are too many cross currents, notably religion, to warrant any more definite forecast.

Coolidge's plurality in 1924 was 92,289. Harding had a lead in the State of 714,373 in 1920.

Smith Will Gain
There is no question that Governor Smith will receive a bigger vote in Pennsylvania than any previous Democratic candidate. There is every indication, however, that the total vote of the State will exceed any before record. Moreover, the signs are many that Hoover will profit largely from the increased vote.

Registration in large cities is particularly heavy in the residential wards and in all sections containing a large proportion of independently inclined voters.

In both Philadelphia and Pittsburgh the registration has been unprecedented among elements of the population, and in sections where the machines of the two cities have encountered their stiffest opposition in local campaigns. Checkups leave no doubt that there is a strong lineup for Hoover in the class of voters described.

Wets Strong for Al
In Pittsburgh most of the Smith talk is in exceedingly "wet" wards, which ordinarily are Republican organization strongholds.

The results in both of the big cities at the coming election are likely to be the reverse of what ordinarily happens. The big Hoover vote is coming from the people who ordinarily fight the machines or, because of disgust with local politics, frequently refrain from voting.

The centers of the Smith strength in the State will be in the larger cities, because of the prohibition issue. It is generally believed, too, that he will make a big showing generally in the anthracite region. Women voters are going to have much to do with the rendering of Pennsylvania's verdict. They are registering in far greater numbers. Both Republican and Democratic leaders, for the most part, concede that Hoover is specially strong among the women voters.

Many Women Register
In some Pittsburgh districts more women than men have registered to vote. In these same districts, in normal registrations, the men outnumber the women two or three to one.

Republican leaders say that one of the most interesting developments in the campaign is the number of women volunteering to do campaign work for Hoover, who heretofore have not been taking active part in politics.

Chicagoan Addresses Ad Club
Advertising and the business of selling are inseparable, said O. J. McClure, of Chicago, author of the McClure method of salesmanship, before Indianapolis Advertising Club members at the Columbia Club Thursday noon. Advertising cannot be separated from selling, for the two go hand in hand to produce results, he said.

NEW JERSEY'S 'SNIPER' SHOOT

Police Seek Man Who Fired at Two Girls.

By United Press
HAMMONTON, N. J., Oct. 5.—New Jersey's "phantom sniper" who terrorized residents of Camden and nearby cities last winter by firing on them from ambush, has returned, police believe.

The sniper was suspected of firing three shots Thursday night on Miss Marie Errichetto, 22, and her sister, Charlotte, 20, who live near Camden. Although the shots broke a window behind which the girls were sitting and made a hole in the wall, investigators were unable, as in the previous cases, to find the bullets. The girls were unharmed.

CROWE FACES TAXI EXPOSE

Company Charges Larceny
Against Prosecutor.

By United Press
CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Prosecution on charges of larceny threatened Chicago's famous "hanging prosecutor" today for his part in the taxi cab war which has resulted in one murder, the bombing of two Yellow Cab garages and the burning to death of $200,000 worth of thoroughbred race horses belonging to John Hertz, head of the Yellow Cab Company.

The rival Checker Cab Company's attorneys contend that State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe committed larceny when he seized Checker Cab records while investigating the acts of violence that have been attributed to the "war."

Checker officials said Crowe was in collusion with the Yellow Cab interests and that he owned stock in the Yellow concern. Crowe denied that charge.

A hearing on the Checker petition to have Crowe charged with larceny and removed from his official duties in connection with the cab war investigation, comes up today before Chief Justice John J. Sullivan in Criminal Court.

PARISIANS BUZZ OVER RUMOR OF PRINCE'S AMOUR

Link Nicholas of Rumania and Society Girl in Elopement.

By United Press

PARIS, Oct. 5.—Paris ignored official denials from Bucharest today and speculated wildly on the latest topic of royal gossip—whether Prince Nicholas of Rumania, 13 following in the footsteps of his notorious brother, Prince Carol.

Nicholas has been in Paris incognito for a month and persistent reports are that he eloped with a beautiful Rumanian society woman and has refused to return to Bucharest, where he is a member of the regency and one of three guardians of the boy king, Michael.

Outwardly, at least, the prince has led the life of a bachelor here. But last Wednesday night he appeared with a tall, patrician blonde. The next night he appeared again and with the same lovely woman at his side.

Sees Little of Carol

The United Press learned that the prince was joined recently by a woman said to be a society leader in Bucharest. Prince Nicholas is staying at a hotel near the home of Prince Carol and Madam Lepescu, but he sees very little of his brother.

Both Prince Carol and Nicholas have engaged handsome black automobiles with two footmen, but they are engaged in entirely separate lives and their relations are rather formal and meager.

Speculation tonight—and there was plenty of it along sensational lines—centered on whether Prince Nicholas had fled Bucharest because he was disgusted with conditions there or whether he had simply "lost his head" over a woman.

Plead for Return

It was said the prince's disappearance had been known for some time, but that it had been kept secret because of fear of disorder because of his responsible position at Bucharest.

The government officials and Queen Marie, it was said, had sent special couriers and messages to Nicholas pleading with him to return.

Dispatches from Bucharest, however, said the reports were false and that Nicholas was expected to return there Saturday.

Prince Carol was exiled and the crown given to his son, King Michael, after the errand prince had run away with Madame Lepescu, a Jewess and wife of a Rumanian army officer.

Princess Helene of Greece, Carol's wife, recently was granted a divorce.

Neglected Grave Holds First City Child's Mother

Tombstone of Mrs. Jane Corbaly, mother of the first child born in Marion County, found in Clermont cemetery. The inscription reads: "Jane, wife of Jeremiah J. Corbaly. Born Dec. 24, 1798. Died April 7, 1869. The first mother in Marion County."

Forgotten Settlement Is Recalled by Markers in Old Cemetery.

BY HELEN MAHIN

In an old graveyard southeast of Claremont sleeps the mother of the first white child born in Indianapolis. The tombstone is broken and long has lain flat, but the lettering still is distinct.

Under a clump of lilacs 100 feet north of the Indiana University Medical School lies the oldest cemetery in Indianapolis; the stones are gone, but the markers, with the names obliterated, still may be found if the searcher will clear away the drift of time.

When a site for the medical school was sought in 1913, two members of the committee looking over the ground near the city hospital came upon streets named Barnhill, Wilson and Maxwell.

It happened that the committee members were: Dr. John F. Barnhill and Dr. Allison Maxwell, and they knew a good deal about a Wilson family of Indianapolis, one of whom was a brother-in-law of James Whitcomb Riley; but they knew little about the desolate tract lying about the city hospital.

Dr. Barnhill began a research that lasted over several years and brought from the forgotten past the story of a lost settlement, the second earliest of Indianapolis.

Robert Barnhill, the great-grandfather of Dr. Barnhill, came to Marion County from North Carolina by way of Kentucky in 1820, about six months after George Posey arrived, and came to a halt a little farther south. Barnhill located on the exact spot where the Riley Hospital now stands, and in the same year was joined by twenty-five families.

In the fall of 1821 an epidemic probably typhoid, swept through these people. Many of them died; among them the first Barnhill, some of the Maxwells and some of the Wilsons. They were buried in the little cemetery.

A daughter of Robert Barnhill married a man named Corbaly, and in a log cabin where the hospital now stands, a little son, the first white child of Marion county, was born. The descendants still are here.

The Wilson home, the oldest building in Indianapolis, until two years ago stood two blocks east of the Riley Hospital. Then it was razed; but still the dead of that old day sleep under the lilacs, and their names are written in Barnhill and Maxwell and Wilson Sts.

CURTIS PUSHES STUMP IN NINE INDIANA TOWNS

Climaxes Motor Tour of Northern State at Gary Tonight.

BY KENNETH G. CRAWFORD

United Press Staff Correspondent

EN ROUTE WITH SENATOR
CURTIS IN INDIANA, Oct. 5.—Senator Charles Curtis resumed his vice presidential campaign today with a strenuous motor tour of northern Indiana, again defying physicians' orders for complete rest.

Refreshed by an afternoon of his favorite diversion Thursday at the Lincoln Fields horse races, he planned, to make eight short addresses today and a long speech tonight.

He was scheduled for appearances at State Line, Whiting, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor, Hammond, Hobart, Lowell, and Crown Point, and a speech at Gary, where Republicans are planning one of the largest rallies of the Indiana campaign.

Will R. Wood, veteran Indiana Congressman, was expected to pilot Curtis through the day's schedule. The nominee will return to Chicago immediately after his Gary speech and has promised to spend all Saturday in bed as a concession to the doctors whose orders he has persistently disobeyed since arriving in Chicago Tuesday.

He plans to set out for a week's campaign of the Northwest, Sunday morning, making his first speech at Devil's Lake, N. D., Tuesday.

The Senator's physical condition was reported much improved today. He is recovering gradually from the fatigue of his wester trip. His sore throat is improving and his crushed right thumb no longer is painful. He still carries his injured hand in a sling, however.

GROUPS UNITED FOR STATE BRIDGE PLAN

Evansville Chamber of Commerce
Joins Other Supporters.

By United Press

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 5.—Evansville civic and business leaders today stood united for proposed bridge to be built here by Indiana and Kentucky, across the Ohio River.

The Evansville Chamber of Commerce, which had previously endorsed a private span, voted at a directors' meeting with a committee of twelve State bridge boosters to swing their support to the State project. They also decided to appoint a committee of five to work with other State bridge groups in an effort to get an injunction suit on file in Marion County withdrawn.

In the ranks of State span backers are Rotary, Kiwanis and other clubs. The Evansville Manufacturers and Employers' Association has pledged its support.
