Republicans Hit for Making Religion an Issue.

Republican poll takers in Marion County are injecting religion into the campaign, Leroy J. Keach

Marion County Democratic chairman, charged today.

"Definite and specific information has reached the Democratic county headquarters that the Republican poll takers are asking the voters this question: 'What is your religion?' Keach stated in a communication to Democratic poll takers of the county.

"These poll takers," he continued are employees of the Republican county committee and they would not ask this insulting question without the sanction and approval of that organization."

"It is plainly evident that the Republican county committee is injecting religious bigotry and intolerance into the Marion county campaign. This is a detestable un-American brand of politics and clearly an invasion of the personal rights of each and every voter."
